Gamblers forced out of Columbus and Newark, as police officers seek to eliminate gaming in those cities, Tuesday were warned to stay out of Pickaway county. The warning was sounded by Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Judge J. W. Adkins.

"Gamblers and petty racketeers will be arrested and jailed as soon as they appear," was the official pronouncement.

Rumor has it that many of the "easy money men" are turning their eyes toward the rural districts and small towns, believing that they see there an opportunity to continue the practices that have drawn official frowns in the larger cities.

Quoted at Capital

The Columbus police department and authorities of Licking county, of which the seat is Newark, have started campaigns that they hope will end all gaming. The Fairfield county sheriff has joined forces, and has already swung into action. William Belhorn, the Fairfield official, one of Sheriff Charles Radcliff's closest personal friends, has started a campaign that he believes will end slot machines and pinball games, and he intends to spend some time trying to break up the "numbers."

CARGO OF RUM TO POLICEMEN

Joe Carpenter went bicycling riding Monday evening, right into the hands of two policemen.

Joe, officers report, was too inebriated to know which direction the vehicle was moving when they caught up with him. Residents in the vicinity of Walnut street, where Joe lives, saw him trying to navigate, but he just couldn't make the bicycle go where he wished it to travel. He made things dangerous for himself by peddling into the paths of several automobiles, but the drivers were able to steer away from his vehicle.

His antics resulted in a call to police headquarters, so today Carpenter is free under $5 bond, charged with intoxication.

Henry Ford Enters Seventy-Fifth Year
In Biggest Fight of His Fighting CareerBirthday Finds Him on Defensive in Union Battle

DETROIT, July 27.—Henry Ford enters his 75th year July 30th.

Where most men, particularly millionaires, have retired at the end of the 74th year, Ford now is in one of the biggest—if not the biggest—fights of his career. It is against unionization.

"I'm feeling fine," says the motor magnate.

His appearance bears out his words. He looks more like a "spry 55" than a man born July 30, 1863.

His Birthplace

Ford first saw the light of day on a farm near Detroit, which now is a part of his Greenfield village.

His keyword for success always has been "work." But to that today, he can add the word "fight."

First test of his mettle was the Selden patent case, when a group which held patents for a gasoline engine demanded royalties for every car Ford produced.

When other earlier motor car manufacturers bowed before the patent interests, Ford, declaring his gasoline motor was his own idea worked out at night over the kitchen sink board in his home, decided to fight.

Victor in Patent Fight

The case finally was carried to the U. S. supreme court. Ford won. But while the appeal was being carried to the highest tribunal, the fight was particularly acrimonious.

The patent group warned buyers of Ford cars that they might be subject to damage suits. Ford offered every buyer his personal bond against such actions. When he finally won out, other auto makers used that suit as the signal for a halt on royalty payments.

Later, Ford fought Wall street bankers. Then, during the depression, he battled the NRA.

Once, when the government was proposing the soil conservation act, Ford told this writer:

"It is absolutely unnatural."

His Attitude

That, in a few words, explains Ford's attitude toward government regulation of industry. He believes in individual initiative and competition.

He foresees a time when the

FOR JOBLESS

WASHINGTON, July 27.—(UP)—In a period of less than 27 months the federal government has poured $357,655,000 into Ohio to care for the unemployed and promote recovery, a treasury summary disclosed today.

Roughly two-thirds of that sum has been spent in creating jobs under the Works Progress Administration. Ohio WPA expenditures up to the end of the fiscal year on July 30 totaled $214,785,617.

The $357,655,000 represents Ohio's share of emergency funds totaling $7,094,000,000 which congress has appropriated since the creation of WPA on April 8, 1935.

BEAR "HUNTERS"

COLUMBUS, O., July 27.—(UP)—A lesson on bear hunting with pebbles was given here today by four Columbus policemen, a state liquor inspector and a deputy sheriff.

After a 300 pound Canadian black bear broke out of his cage at a filling station, the hunters armed themselves with pistols, tear gas and rope and then set out after the bear.

After a brief search they located the bear. The tear gas and rope were used in vain. Then they drove the animal back to his quarters with a few well tossed stones.

Although Henry Ford turned over active control of his company to his son, Edsel, he still maintains an active interest.

Non Partisan League

WASHINGTON, July 27.—(UP)—John L. Lewis, through the C. I. O., assumed control today of labor's Non-Partisan League in a move pointing to new political alignments and suggesting a break with the Roosevelt administration.

There were hints of a third party move. Authoritative sources said the first objective of the League in its new form may be expected in New York City's mayoralty campaign.

Backs La Guardia

The American Labor Party, New York state affiliate of the League, has been selected as a "proving ground" and the initial test of Lewis' political strength. It will attempt to carry Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia into office for another term without the sponsorship of either major party.

It has been reported in political circles that La Guardia contemplates campaigning as the American Labor Party's candidate alone and that he will not seek the additional nomination of either the Republican or Democratic party.

It was learned that Lewis has, in effect, purged the League of both Democratic party and American Labor Party members.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—(UP)—The senate today turned to consideration of the Black-Connelly wages and hours bill, with a show-down fight anticipated on efforts to amend the National Labor Relations act to give employers greater privileges and authority.

The show-down was expected when Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg, R., Mich., seeks to have added to the wage-hour measure as a "rider" a series of amendments he has drawn to modify the Labor Relations act. His proposed amendments would provide for appeals by employers to the National Labor Relations board, and would place greater responsibility on employers.

May Die in Rush

Meanwhile, speculation centered around the question of whether action on the wage and hours measure could be completed in both house and senate before the last-minute adjournment rush. The bill has not yet been reported by the House Labor committee.

Adjournment plans apparently were "in the making," with administration leaders conferring in an effort to hold congress in session long enough to act on such measures as the Wagner housing bill, farm legislation and tax loopholes plugging bills, as well as the wage-hour legislation.

Senate majority leader Alben W. Barkley, D., Ky., said he could not make a definite statement concerning adjournment "for two or three days." Meanwhile, Republicans and a large number of Democrats, including many opponents of the wage-hour bill, were seeking to convince the leadership of the wisdom of prompt adjournment.

LONDON, July 27.—(UP)—Twelve convicts were killed today when 300 convicted murderers mutinied in a 3,800-foot deep prison salt mine at Targu-Ogna, Roumania, an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Bucharest reported.

The convicts attacked guards in the depths of the mine with picks, hammers and shovels. Four guards were injured seriously and several were hurt slightly as they fired on the rioters.

As soon as they became aware of the outbreak, prison authorities on the surface cut off the mine's electric light and water supplies. Thirst became unbearable in the salt diggings and the mutineers soon commanded elevators and came to the surface. As they reached the surface, guards seized each group and herded them into the prison.

Grievances over food were reported to have been the cause of the disturbance.

SHANGHAI, July 27.—(UP)—A Central (Chinese) News agency dispatch from Peiping reported tonight that Japanese warplanes had dropped poison gas bombs in the Lufow area just southwest of Peiping. The dispatch gave no details and was confirmed from other sources.

LONDON, July 27.—(UP)—The British ambassador to China and Japan have been instructed to express the hope that further fighting will be avoided in Peiping. Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the house of commons today. He said the United States and France had issued similar instructions.

PEIPING, July 27.—(UP)—but ammunition was scarce. Chinese troops, after suffering a humiliating defeat at the city's southwest gate, attacked a Chinese regiment in force at Tangchow, 15 miles east of Peiping, and according to Japanese sources killed or wounded every man of the 400 to 500 troops in the garrison.

Germans were ordered into their embassy. British authorities asked that women and children of the nationals spend the night in the legation quarter. Wealthy Chinese flocked into the quarter and all foreign hotels were jammed.

Americans awaited a summons to make for designated concentration points where marines were ready to escort them to the embassy quarter, fighting their way through the streets if necessary.

Almost all the 5,000 Japanese residents of Peiping were in the quarter.

Peiping was cut off from Tientsin and the coast by railroad, bus, telegraph and telephone. By wireless, the sole remaining means of communication, Tientsin residents of Peiping were in the quarter.

LOYALISTS HOLD FAST DESPITE DEADLY DRIVE

MADRID, July 27—(UP)—Nationalist troops sent wave upon wave of shock troops today against Loyalists fortified in Quijorna, one of the key towns on the west of Madrid front.

Communications reported the Loyalists to be holding fast, awaiting an expected relief column.

Communications indicates that since the beginning of the Nationalist counter-attack, the biggest of the civil war: the Loyalist salient cut southward into the insurgent lines had been reduced in area from 100 square miles to 75 square miles.

BUFFALO STORES RATIONING FOOD TO CUSTOMERS

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 27—(UP)—Grocery stores rationed their supplies to customers today and many housewives began shopping elsewhere to escape the high prices brought on by strikes which have cut off the city's meat and staple foodstuff sources.

At several stores shoppers accustomed to purchasing a dozen eggs were given half that amount with the explanation that the storekeepers were trying to take care of their regular patrons by limiting the quantity of purchases.

Other stores limited their customers to a half pound of butter. Shelves which had been stocked with canned goods and other staple foodstuffs were running bare.

FORD ATTORNEY RAPS CONDUCT OF LABOR TRIAL

DETROIT, July 27—(UP)—Louis Colombo, Sr., Ford Motor company attorney at the National Labor Relations board hearing, climaxed a series of verbal clashes with the trial examiner today with a belittled charge that "I'm being treated like a horse thief."

The outburst came as Colombo, defending the company against charges of Wagner act violations through "unfair labor practices," had been denied numerous objections by Trial Examiner John T. Lindsay.

Colombo had objected strenuously to the cross-examination by Labor Board Attorney Laurence Knapp of Dennis McKinney, general foreman at the Ford Highland Park plant.

"Now I submit that there should be a little fairness in this proceeding," Colombo shouted at the trial examiner.

"Now, now wait a minute," Lindsay protested.

"Well, I'm going to talk—I'm going to say what I think," Colombo persisted.

Lindsay leaned toward the court stenographer and ordered him to "strike this from the record."

The Ford attorney, face flushed, shouted:

"I protest; I'm getting no courtesy here. I'm treated like a horse thief instead of like an officer in a court of justice."

Lindsay ordered the attorney's remarks stricken from the record.

City School Year Begins On Sept. 12

Addition To Be Ready for Pupils Late in August; County Date Uncertain

Circleville schools will open Sept. 12 for a 36-week period, while those of the county system will begin classes on Sept. 6 or 7, the definite date not yet being determined.

Charles H. May, chairman of the Circleville board of education, said the board had decided on the Sept. 12 date after contractors in charge of the construction of the addition to the high school disclosed that the new building would be ready for occupancy before Sept. 1. The structure will actually be completed about Aug. 15, the board has been informed, but some placing of equipment and other details will be necessary before the rooms can be occupied.

To Relieve Congestion

The addition will relieve congestion that has harassed educators and pupils in recent years. Fourteen new classrooms will be provided. Main corridors of the high school building extend into the addition then east into the halls of the Corwin building. The Trapp-Carroll Co., Columbus, is the general contractor in charge of the work. The total cost of the addition is $78,283 with the government providing $36,900.

The teaching corps is now complete with several changes made. Miss Grace L. Teegardin, of Duval, will be in charge of vocal music in all buildings, succeeding Miss Marjorie Priest, a bride-to-be; Loren L. Pace, of Roseville, will teach French in place of Mrs. Lloyd Jones; Miss Doris Schreiner has been named a grade teacher to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Miss Thelma O'Hara, who will teach in Painesville, and Miss Mariel Sayre joins the staff as an additional eighth grade teacher, increasing enrollment necessitating another instructor.

Salaries as fixed by the board are practically the same as last year.

CONVICT GOES ON STRIKE 80 FEET IN AIR

SAN QUENTIN, Cal., July 27. (UP)—Meher Golas, protesting prisoner, ended his strike this afternoon.

SAN QUENTIN, Cal., July 27—(UP)—Meher Golas, 32, a prisoner from Los Angeles, today sat atop an 80-foot tower in the center of San Quentin's prison courtyard.

Last night he broke from a line of prisoners and clambered up the tower which is surmounted by a battery of lamps. Guards, believing him an electrician making repairs on the lights, paid no attention to him.

Prison officials said Golas was protesting his confinement and wanted to be transferred to the "island." He did not say what "island" he desired.

He will be allowed to continue his strike until forced down by hunger and thirst.

NEW YORK, July 27—(UP)—World's heavyweight champion Joe Louis arrived today from Chicago to start training for his Aug. 26 title defense against Tom Farr of Wales. He was accompanied by his managers, Julian Black and Johnny Roxborough, and his trainer, Jack Blackburn.

Louis said he was "glad that the public seems to think so well of Farr, but I hope I knocks him out."

Louis went to the Yankee stadium to see his favorite Detroit Tigers play the New York Yanks. Immediately after the game he will depart for his training site at Pompton Lakes, N. J.

COUNTY W. P. A. ORDERED TO CUT WORKING FORCE

W. P. A. in Pickaway county has been instructed to reduce its number of workers from 149 to 136 prior to August 1. The 136 total will be permitted during the next month providing another major slash in Ohio's total is not ordered by the government. The July quota was 149.

All other counties in the district have been instructed to cut down, Ross taking the greatest reduction, 45, from 479 to 434. Fayette county will cut its number from 289 to 263, and Fairfield will have 237 on its lists in August as compared to 259 in July.

MATTER DENIED TRY AT NORTH POLE HOP

WASHINGTON, July 27—(UP)—Fred Fagg, director of the bureau of air commerce, said today that an application for federal permission to fly across the North Pole to Russia had been denied to James Mattern at least for the time being.

Fagg said that the refusal was "tentative and it can be changed later if Mattern submits additional justifying evidence."

URGES TO GUARD AGAINST C. I. O.

Workers at Cleveland Go
To Tasks Past Picket
Line Dubbed Vicious

ILLEGAL ACTS CHARGED
Republic Asks Authorities
For Protection of Non Strikers

CLEVELAND, July 27—(UP)—The Republic Steel corporation, charging that the C. I. O. had adopted "lawless tactics," appealed to city authorities today to protect its workers from violence.

One man was killed and scores were injured in a series of clashes yesterday between strikers, non-strikers and police. Eighty policemen were stationed at the gates of the company's Corrigan-McKinney plant this morning to prevent another battle.

Republic officials issued a statement declaring that attempts to prevent their employees from going to work represented efforts by the C. I. O. "to retrieve a strike which it has lost and to save its face in the eyes of its members."

Police held five men on disorderly conduct charges as a result of fighting which broke out when the plant changed shifts at 11 o'clock last night. Two clashes earlier in the day had resulted in the death of John Orecny, a striker. He was struck by an automobile operated by a non-striker who attempted to drive through the picket lines.

55 Hurt in Riot
Hospitals treated 55 men for riot injuries. One man suffered a compound skull fracture and was in a critical condition.

Strikers and non-strikers went into battle with iron pipes, wooden clubs and bricks. Dozens of automobiles were stoned. Fist fights occurred in alleys and streets surrounding the plant. Police dispersed the crowd with tear gas.

Non-strikers retaliated by raiding the headquarters of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, C. I. O. affiliate, near the plant. Windows were broken, and several persons were beaten.

Capt. James Ferrie of the police reinforced the guard which had been stationed at the plant since the strike began May 26. He said there would be no request for national guard assistance. Guardsmen had been called out earlier in the Ohio strike area after several battles between non-strikers and steel company employees who started a back-to-work movement.

Republic officials said "regular employees" had been working in the Corrigan-McKinney plant for nearly three weeks.

"Those who are working are doing so because they wish to, because they have families to support and obligations to meet," a company statement said.

Violence Charged
"They are working in the face of a vicious, violent picket line. Many of the men have been seriously beaten and still continue to work."

"The C. I. O., by adopting lawless, illegal tactics, by organizing mass movements of men, few if any of whom are employees of Republic or have any direct interest in the controversy, has precipitated a clash between the Cleveland police and union members which has already resulted in violence."

"No one except radical labor leaders denies the right of men to work. Even these leaders cannot deny that a normal force is at work in the Corrigan-McKinney plant making steel. Any effort to prevent these men from going to work and from their work through the use of violence is an effort on the part of the C. I. O. to retrieve a strike which it has lost and to save its face in the eyes of its members."

"Republic has only one request to make of the authorities of any community. That is, that its employees be protected in getting in or out of the plant and in their homes."

Strikers had protested to Mayor Harold H. Burton against police activity at the plant, and had demanded that the plant be closed.

Preserving Vegetables Provides Fine Food

Preserving vegetables by freezing is one of the newer and rapidly growing developments in providing fine foods for American homes.

Prof. H. D. Brown, of Ohio State university, points to the record of one company which has contracts for 20,000,000 pounds of frozen peas this year, which is twice as many as all concerns marketed last year. Other vegetables which retain their high quality after freezing are sweet corn, snap beans, and lima beans.

About 250 bushels of green peas were frozen at the university this year. Prof. Brown says the bright color of frozen peas is not due to any addition of coloring substances but is the result of the intensification of the normal color in this preserving process.

Peas which are to be frozen are first dipped for one minute in boiling water. This helps remove any foreign substances, takes off the gummy covering on the peas, and kills any enzymes which would tend to ripen the peas in storage although they are frozen in a temperature about 10 degrees below zero. If the enzymes have been killed, the peas can be held in storage a year or longer.

Prof. Brown contends that frozen vegetables retain their original flavors because no enzymes are present to change them. He also says there is no record of anyone becoming ill from eating vegetables preserved by freezing.

At present, Prof. Brown says it is not practical for families to preserve foods in this manner, but he believes that the further development of the cold storage locker system, now in quite general use in western states, may make such a plan feasible. One advantage of the freezing system is that it increases the demand for peas. Housewives dislike to shell peas and they can get frozen peas already shelled at almost any time during the year.

NORTH DAKOTA REPORTS VAST HORDE OF DUCKS

FORMAN, N. D. (UP)—Ducks are nesting in the southeastern section of North Dakota in the greatest numbers in 20 years, Sargent and Richland county sportsmen report.

Conservation experts and the sportsmen forecast revival of a nearly lost sport—duck hunting—this fall.

George Scoville of Forman, chairman of the Sargent county planning board and an ardent sportsman, said he has observed upward of 40 species of ducks in the revived Tewaukon lake string area this year.

"I have never seen so many since 1916," he said.

Explanation offered is that the birds in their northern flight this spring came through eastern North Dakota rather than farther west—as is their custom, because of the quantity of water in the Red River area and the area immediately adjoining.

In South Dakota a duck crop of approximately 1,000,000 will be produced this year, according to O. H. Johnson, director of the state game and fish department. Johnson based his prediction on figures collected from deputy game wardens who have made a systematic count of male ducks on the sloughs, marshes, lakes and streams in their respective territories. Each male is considered as representing a nesting female.

1500 PRAY, BUT WILL WAR FOR FREE CHURCH

NOGALES, SONORA, Mex., July 27—(UP)—The 1,500 Nogales Catholics held siege in their outlawed church today, praying for religious freedom and preparing to fight for it.

A government order to evict them was held in abeyance and peace was assured at least until 3 p. m. today.

In the manner of kneel-down strikers, the worshippers set up a guard to resist internal revenue collector Angel La Garda, who was under orders to seize and close the church.

The Blessed Sacrament was removed by Father De La Torre, assistant pastor. Taking advantage of the few hours respite, the strikers prayed joyously. Their injunction, by which they gained admission to the padlocked church, expired yesterday. They resisted when La Garda appeared last night with two assistants to oust them, and further government action was delayed until this afternoon.

It was understood that La Garda appealed to the city fire department to have worshippers drenched with water, and that he also had asked soldiers to clear the church, but both forces refused to aid him.

Catholic leaders shouted angry threats when La Garda came toward the church and when he decided last night not to interfere, a woman arose and shouted the news to the kneeling strikers. She exhorted them to "pray to keep the church open."

Mexican churches were closed in 1934 on orders of Rodolfo Elias Calles. The order was modified this year after several uprisings and most Catholic churches in Sonora, except the Nogales church, were reopened, with restrictions. Church officials feared a new general order closing all churches and uprisings have been threatened in Villa De Seris, near Hermosillo, the state capital, and in other remote sections.

They talked of their affair and of the fact that both were married. Mrs. Jackson took off the red leather belt which added a touch of color to her white dress and handed it to Martin.

"She asked me to kill her," he told police.

He looped the belt around her neck and pulled it taut. When she no longer breathed he drove to Flushing.

Police charged Martin with homicide. First, however, they telephoned Bert Jackson that his wife was dead.

FARM LABORER BOUND TO JURY FOR FORGERY

Alvis Williams, farm laborer, was bound to the grand jury under $500 bond, Monday, by Justice of the Peace H. O. Eveland on a charge of forgery. Williams, arrested in Mt. Sterling Sunday night, admitted the charge.

The affidavit against the laborer was filed by Wayne Smith, Monroe township farmer for whom Williams had previously worked.

FREDDIE MAY QUIT PICTURES, AUNT DECLARES

Child Star Bartholomew
Can Keep But Little of
$1,000 Salary

$2500 BEING DEMANDED

Lawyers, Family, Agents and Tax Collectors All Dip
Into Boy's Wage

HOLLYWOOD, July 27—(UP)

So little is left of Freddie Bartholomew's $1,100 weekly salary after lawyers, tax collectors, relatives and agents take their shares that his aunt and guardian, Miss Millicent Bartholomew, said today she was considering taking him back to England, ending his motion picture career.

Miss Bartholomew has been trying to negotiate a $2,500 weekly contract for the curly-haired little actor and failing that, she plans to restore him to private life in his native land, away from the lawsuits and publicity of the movie colony, "where he can grow up like a normal boy."

She took him away today on his first vacation in ten months.

"Everybody has been after his money," she said. "Unless his future can be better assured I don't see any reason for him to continue in Hollywood. There has been no happiness for either of us. I am planning to take him back to England where he can go to school. If we go, he will not return. He could always make good later on after he has completed his education."

Salary Divided
Of his present $1,100 weekly salary for 40 weeks a year from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, $1,000 a month goes for income taxes.

10 per cent for agents fees, $400 a month for his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Bartholomew; $800 a month for his maintenance. The balance is about $12,000 a year.

Lawyers who handled the boy's guardianship suit have charged $25,000. Miss Bartholomew said. That sum represented his entire savings for two years. The litigation extended over several months and ended with an arrangement whereby the aunt became legal guardian and a California bank became guardian for the boy's estate.

Miss Bartholomew has sued to recover part of the $25,000 from the lawyers. "You can see," she said, "that there has been nothing left."

Role Cancelled
Because of the failure to agree on Miss Bartholomew's demands for a $2,500 salary, the studio has cancelled Freddie's role in the picture "Thoroughbreds Don't Cry." Douglas Scott, a youngster from another studio, was given the part. Plans to cast Freddie in Rudyard Kipling's "Kim," also were withheld. The boy's latest success was in Kipling's "Captains Courageous."

Freddie also has a trust fund that was created with the adoption agreement between his parents and his aunt. Miss Bartholomew said she intended to ask for an accounting of it.

"I was informed there was only $20,000 in the fund," she said. "A year ago I deposited $26,000 which I had saved from Freddie's earnings."

BERGEN BOOKED

Charlie McCarthy is about to become a movie star. He and his master voice, that of Edgar Bergen, have been contracted to take parts in M-G-M's "Follies," which will be filmed starting in August. That should hold W. C. Fields, Charlie's dearest enemy, for a while. What's more, there are indications that the celluloid tycoons may pit Charlie against "W. C." in a second picture later this year. Which reminds me that an eminent psychologist has an explanation for those "advances" which Dummy Charlie always makes to the feminine guests of the coffee broadcast. It seems that Charlie's daddy, Bergen, is a bashful bachelor—so the ventriloquist puts into the mouth of Charlie words he himself wouldn't dare to utter, much as he would like to. Besides, who would sue a dummy for breach of promise?

BONANOVA RETURNS

Fortunio Bonanova, the "Clark Gable of South America," next Thursday night, July 29, becomes one of the few guest stars to make two appearances in one month in the Music Hall. Other guests include Adolphe Menjou and Madge Evans of the films.

Bonanova, a singer, was one of the first guests Bob Burns selected three weeks ago when he became "keeper of the Music Hall" for the summer months. Lionel Stander and Basil Rathbone are the only other artists to make more than one appearance in the hall in a short period of time.

Bonanova will sing on the broadcast over the NBC red network at 9 p. m. (EST). Madge Evans

WOMAN FINED, HUSBAND FREED AFTER BRAWL

Mayor W. J. Graham decided in a hearing Monday night that Mrs. Sadie Lowery, Huston street, provoked a fight in Don White's southeast restaurant early Sunday, so he freed her husband, Ralph, but fined her $5. Davis of charges filed following an altercation that demanded the attention of the entire police department for several hours. James Toles, another alleged instigator, was fined $10 and costs for his part in the fracas and was sent to the county jail.

Mrs. Lowery paid a fine of $5, costs suspended. Ten dollars posted by her husband for his hearing was returned.

Mayor Graham said that although Toles was guilty of breaking a parole from the Mansfield reformatory that he and Parole Officer Remington had decided not to return him to the institution. "After all," the mayor said, "the violation was not so bad." Hill, also on parole, will not be returned since he was found not guilty of charges filed against him. Witnesses before the mayor said that Hill was trying to prevent Toles from getting into trouble when he (Hill) and Emerine started to fight. Both men carried scars into the mayor's court. Hill having a cut lip and Emerine a black eye and a bruised cheek.

Mrs. Emerine "cleaned a table" of beer mugs and glasses, throwing them at Toles, the mayor was informed.

The mayor's hearings resulted in four persons being bound to the grand jury after pleas of not guilty on statutory charges. Lafe Eby, Bessie Lowery, Stella Rambo and John Smith were all remanded to jail under $200 bond pending the jury session.

John Lowery, negro, was fined and Menjou, often-called Holly-wood's best dressed actor, will be interviewed by Burns, Arkansas' glamorous radio and movie actor. Music will be supplied by Johnny Scott Trotter's orchestra, the Foursome and the Paul Taylor Chorists.

FUNERAL DIRECTOR SUES TRANSPORT COMPANY

Fred C. Clark, funeral director, filed suit in common pleas court Monday against the Continental Transportation Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., for $203.50 due on an account. Clark says in his petition that he prepared the body of Stanley Staskill, Pittsburgh, driver for the company, for burial at the request of the transportation firm. He claims he has received no pay for his work.

Staskill was killed when he drove his truck against a Norfolk and Western locomotive at the W. Main street grade crossing Oct. 29, 1936.

HOLLYWOOD, July 27—(UP)—

So little is left of Freddie Bartholomew's $1,000 weekly salary after lawyers, tax collectors, relatives and agents take their shares that his aunt and guardian, Miss Millicent Bartholomew, said today she was considering taking him back to England, ending his motion picture career.

Miss Bartholomew has been trying to negotiate a $2,500 weekly contract for the curly-haired little actor and failing that, she plans to restore him to private life in his native land, away from the lawsuits and publicity of the movie colony, "where he can grow up like a normal boy."

She took him away today on his first vacation in ten months.

"Everybody has been after his money," she said. "Unless his future can be better assured I don't see any reason for him to continue in Hollywood. There has been no happiness for either of us. I am planning to take him back to England where he can go to school. If we go, he will not return. He could always make good later on after he has completed his education."

Salary Divided

Of his present $1,100 weekly salary for 40 weeks a year from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, $1,000 a month goes for income taxes; 10 per cent for agents fees; $400 a month for his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Bartholomew; $800 a month for his maintenance. The balance is about $12,000 a year.

Lawyers who handled the boy's guardianship suit have charged $25,000, Miss Bartholomew said. That sum represented his entire savings for two years. The litigation extended over several months and ended with an arrangement whereby the aunt became legal guardian and a California bank became guardian for the boy's estate.

Miss Bartholomew has sued to recover part of the $25,000 from the lawyers. "You can see," she said, "that there has been nothing left."

Role Cancelled

Because of the failure to agree on Miss Bartholomew's demands for a $2,500 salary, the studio has cancelled Freddie's role in the picture "Thoroughbreds Don't Cry." Douglas Scott, a youngster from another studio, was given the part. Plans to cast Freddie in Rudyard Kipling's "Kim," also were withheld. The boy's latest success was in Kipling's "Captains Courageous."

Freddie also has a trust fund that was created with the adoption agreement between his parents and his aunt. Miss Bartholomew said she intended to ask for an accounting of it.

"I was informed there was only $20,000 in the fund," she said. "A year ago I deposited $26,000 which I had saved from Freddie's earnings."

BERGEN BOOKED

Charlie McCarthy is about to become a movie star. He and his master's voice, that of Edgar Bergen, have been contracted to take parts in M-G-M's "Follies," which will be filmed starting in August. That should hold W. C. Fields, Charlie's dearest enemy, for a while. What's more, there are indications that the celluloid tycoons may pit Charlie against "W. C." in a second picture later this year. . . . Which reminds me that an eminent psychologist has an explanation for those "advances" which Dummy Charlie always makes to the feminine guests of the coffee broadcast. It seems that Charlie's daddy, Bergen, is a bashful bachelor—so the ventriloquist puts into the mouth of Charlie words he himself wouldn't dare to utter, much as he would like to. . . . Besides, who would sue a dummy for breach of promise?

BONANOVA RETURNS

Fortunio Bonanova, the "Clark Gable of South America," next Thursday night, July 29, becomes one of the few guest stars to make two appearances in one month in the Music Hall. Other guests include Adolphe Menjou and Madge Evans of the films.

Bonanova, a singer, was one of the first guests Bob Burns selected three weeks ago when he became "keeper of the Music Hall" for the summer months. Lionel Stander and Basil Rathbone are the only other artists to make more than one appearance in the hall in a short period of time.

Bonanova will sing on the broadcast over the NBC red network at 9 p. m. (EST). Madge Evans

WOMAN FINED, HUSBAND FREED AFTER BRAWL

Mayor W. J. Graham decided in a hearing Monday night that Mrs. Sadie Lowery, Huston street, provoked a fight in Don White's southeast restaurant early Sunday, so he freed her husband, Ralph, Burl Hill, and Luther "Dick" Davis of charges filed following an altercation that demanded the attention of the entire police department for several hours. James Toles, another alleged instigator, was fined $10 and costs for his part in the fracas and was sent to the county jail.

Mrs. Lowery paid a fine of $5, costs suspended. Ten dollars posted by her husband for his hearing was returned.

Mayor Graham said that although Toles was guilty of breaking a parole from the Mansfield reformatory that he and Parole Officer Remington had decided not to return him to the institution. "After all," the mayor said, "the violation was not so bad." "Hill, also on parole, will not be returned since he was found not guilty of charges filed against him. Witnesses before the mayor said that Hill was trying to prevent Toles from getting into trouble when he (Hill) and Emerine started to fight. Both men carried scars into the mayor's court, Hill having a cut lip and Emerine a black eye and a bruised cheek.

Mrs. Emerine "cleaned a table" of beer mugs and glasses, throwing them at Toles, the mayor was informed.

The mayor's hearings resulted in four persons being bound to the grand jury after pleas of not guilty on statutory charges. Lyle Eby, Bessie Lowery, Stella Rambo and John Smith were all remanded to jail under $200 bond pending the jury session.

John Lowery, negro, was fined

and Menjou, often-called Hollywood's best dressed actor, will be interviewed by Burns, Arkansas' glamorous radio and movie actor. Music will be supplied by Johnny Scott Trotter's orchestra, the Foursome and the Paul Taylor Choristers.

CORN CROP OF COUNTY WARDS OFF ALL PESTS

Normal Production Expected Despite Loss Due To High Waters

ARMYWORM IS DEFEATED

Earworm Fails to Appear and Hoppers, Chinch, Moths All are Missing

Although crop experts in many parts of Ohio fear widespread damage to the fast-growing corn crop, flood water from the Scioto river is the only evil to make its appearance to date in Pickaway county.

F. K. Blair, agricultural agent, has been watching the county's corn crop with careful eyes to locate traces of any scourge that might find its way into the county. He expects a normal crop production total despite the damage done in the Scioto's bottoms.

Some agricultural experts believe that corn in their counties will be hit hard by pests. One bug is reported chewing the ears, another is boring through the stalks, and a third is feasting on the roots. T. H. Parks, entomologist of Ohio State university, says the armyworm, which was fought successfully in Pickaway county earlier in the summer, damaged corn in some counties before it was brought under control. It gained much headway in several communities before farm leaders were aware of its presence. The work done by Pickaway county farm officials and farmers in combating the scourge was efficient and brought the hoped-for result, elimination of the pest.

The corn earworm attacks tomatoes and sweet corn and damages other growing crops, too. The adult of this insect is a moth which ordinarily travels the deep South each year, but the recent mild winter permitted it to survive unusually far North and to start its depredations early. No effective control measure is known. So far as Pickaway county farm officials have been able to determine it has not appeared here.

Rotenone, an insecticide which is not poisonous to human beings, is recommended as a control for cabbage worms and the Mexican bean beetle. The rotenone is applied as a dust on cabbage and may be used in either a dust or a spray on beans.

Grasshoppers, chinch bugs and codling moths were eliminated almost entirely in Pickaway county by the heavy early summer rains, but several other pests usually thrive in wet weather. They include corn earworms, cankerworms, armyworms, elm leaf beetle, Mexican bean beetle, cabbage worms, grape leaf hopper, corn rootworm, and the European corn borer. All of which, according to Mr. Blair, shows that farmers have much more to think about than high waters and strong winds.

Food Service Famous 113 Years Withdrawn

This week marks the passing of one of Circleville's oldest places of business—the Hotel Boggs. Through the years the Boggs has become an institution in the minds of Circlevillians, many of whom recollect happenings of the past in which it played a part.

Mrs. Erwin Boggs, for the last 28 years the proprietress, has announced that the last meal will be served Saturday, July 31.

Thereafter there will be no public catering.

The Hotel Boggs has been in business under different names and managements since before 1824. At that date it was purchased by William Henry, and became the Henry House. Previously to 1824 it was merely a tavern where travelers and townsmen came for relaxation.

About 1850, after several years of vacancy, the building was again used for a hotel, this time the National House. Many tales are told about it, but outstanding among these is the story of the fire.

The large frame stable adjoining the hotel was burned by a firebug and 22 horses belonging to guests were destroyed. At some time in the forties or fifties it is not definitely known when, the building was used as a girls boarding school. Its heyday however was in the middle and third quarter of the 19th century, when it was known as the Pickaway House. Many 'old timers' of Circleville remember when parties of 30 or 40 young men and women would ride to town on horseback to attend balls held there.

To some it would be an all-day ride, so the ladies would carry large carpet bags containing their evening dresses on the right horn of their sidesaddles. They danced, spent the night at the hotel, and rode back home the next day. With the era of the locomotive, business began to decline. Before this several stage coach lines ran through Circleville and the passengers stayed at the hotel at night. Farmers would need as much as a whole day to get from their farms to town and they, too, swelled the trade. But with fast transportation it was different. Farmers would come and go in the same day, and there were no stage passengers.

The hostelry continued under the name, Pickaway House, until 1909 by Mrs. Boggs. Boggs' meals became famous throughout Pickaway county and central Ohio. Two years ago the old Boggs building was torn down to make room for the new postoffice, but customers continued to take meals and rooms in the new location. But after Saturday no more food will be served.

Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Warren of Circleville, Mr. and Mrs. George Dennison of Groveport, Mr. John Warren, Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Bookwalter, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Krieger and son Donald visited Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Williams at London, O., on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Metcalf visited Mrs. Harry Metcalf and new daughter Katherine May at Berger hospital in Circleville on Friday. They reported Mrs. Metcalf and baby doing nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul D. U. Brundige and Miss Kathryn L. Brundige and Mrs. Charles Brundige.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jones, Jr., visited on Friday night with his parents at Jamestown, O. On Saturday Mrs. Jones visited Mrs. Herbert Pfaltzgraff in Columbus.

Mrs. Mary Dunn of Ironton, O., was the guest of her sons, Arthur of Cedar Hill, Clarence of Meade and Fred of Kingston last week.

Mrs. O. E. Raub was the guest of Mrs. Frank Spetnagle in Chillicothe, on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ward of Circleville and Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Butts left on Sunday for a fishing trip in Michigan.

Mrs. Howard S. Boggs and daughter Marjorie Anne left on Saturday for a visit with Mrs. Caroline Smith in Chattanooga, Tenn. Mr. Boggs, who is located in Rome, Georgia, will join them and all will later go to Rome for a visit. They expect to be away two weeks.

Miss Esther Young is the guest of relatives in Circleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dunn and Mrs. Mary Terry were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. David Terry and daughter Carol Anne at Cedar Hill, on Sunday.

BRIDGE SOLD FOR JUNK AT $10 PER TON

Harry Topolosky, Ashville junk dealer, Monday received a contract from county commissioners to wreck and remove all steel of the Dry Run bridge on the Dawson-Yanketown road in Monroe township on his offer to pay the county $10 a ton for the steel.

Topolosky will wreck the bridge at the scene, removing the steel to his yard in Ashville.

The commissioners are considering plans for a new bridge to replace that wrecked by an automobile several weeks ago. Pending definite action, a temporary wooden structure is being built.

Veteran Waits 20 Years For Honorable Discharge

ROBBINSDALE, Minn., (UP)—Recently received, honorable discharge papers of Walter G. Grinols, of Robbinsdale, were 20 years late.

Grinols was discharged from the 151st Field Artillery regiment when he contracted pleurisy. At the time he received the customary $60 bonus and a blue discharge certificate on which was the statement "loyal and faithful service." The blue certificate, however, Grinols learned many years later, meant dishonorable discharge.

He started action to obtain redress and after several years he received the correct papers honorably discharging him from the service.

Hack and Taxi Driver Quits After 41 Years

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., (UP)—Seventy-one-year-old Charles Dalrymple, oldest Jacksonville taxicab driver has retired after 41 years in the business.

Dalrymple opened his taxi stand in the horse and buggy days—on Nov. 25, 1899. Fares ranged from 25 to 50 cents, according to distance traveled.

Following a five-month enlistment in the Army for the Spanish-American War, Dalrymple entered into the transportation and livery service, later selling his livery stable.

In 1915 he discarded his horse and buggy for the more modern gas-operated vehicle, and plied his trade down through the years.

Although he had no idea as to the miles he has traveled during his years as a cab driver, Dalrymple does hold the long-distance record for service as a taxicab driver in this section.

She was engaged in filming Universal's "Breezing Home," the picture starting at the Grand Theatre on Wednesday, and the shooting would require several days more.

NATIONAL PARKS ON WAY TO SET TOURIST RECORD

SALT LAKE CITY (UP)—Tourist travel in the western states will exceed all previous years in volume and trade values, according to a report of the National Parks Services, which shows a 15 per cent increase in travel to the Rock Mountain national park.

The Colorado park, on U. S. highway 30, is the third national park to report considerable increase in tourist travel this year. It counted 148,017 persons visiting up to July 13, as compared with 128,420 during the same period of last year. The bulk of travel was by private automobiles.

The Utah State Automobile association predicted tourists would spend more than $2,000,000 this year in Utah in comparison with $1,500,000 for 1936.

Idaho authorities predict a 25 per cent increase in tourist spending.

BIDS ON REST ROOMS GO OVER MAXIMUM PRICE

County commissioners and councilmen, meeting in joint session Monday afternoon, declined to let the contract for construction of restrooms in the front basement of the courthouse because the bids submitted were higher than estimates fixed for the work.

Only three bids were filed, but $4,500 was asked for the complete job. The officials had set $4,000 as the maximum price to be paid for the work.

Councilmen T. M. Barnes and F. A. Marion met with the commissioners to open the bids. Since the project is being paid for co-operatively by the county and the city, it is necessary that both parties agree to any increase in the cost of the work. Barnes said after the meeting that he would seek a special session of council to decide the city's action.

Bidders told the officials Monday that the cost of materials for the work was increasing and that $4,000 was below the actual cost of the necessary labor and material.

The restrooms when completed will replace the inadequate rooms now available in the city building. Convenient entrances will be provided to the new rooms. They will be maintained by the county.

GERHARDT NOT TO CALL JURY BEFORE FALL

George E. Gerhardt, prosecuting attorney, said Tuesday that no special session of the grand jury is contemplated at this time. Several cases are pending for jury action, but, because of the harvest season and the expense involved, the session will probably be postponed until the regular September term of court.

Food Service Famous 113 Years Withdrawn

This week marks the passing of one of Circleville's oldest places of business—the Hotel Boggs. Through the years the Boggs has become an institution in the minds of Circlevillians, many of whom recollect happenings of the past in which it played a part.

Mrs. Erwin Boggs, for the last 28 years the proprietress, has announced that the last meal will be served Saturday, July 31.

Thereafter there will be no public catering.

The Hotel Boggs has been in business under different names and managements since before 1824. At that date it was purchased by William Henry, and became the Henry House. Previously to 1824 it was merely a tavern where travelers and townsmen came for relaxation.

About 1850, after several years of vacancy, the building was again used for a hotel, this time the National House. Many tales are told about it, but outstanding among these is the story of the fire. The large frame stable adjoining the hotel was burned by a firebug and 22 horses belonging to guests were destroyed.

At some time in the forties or fifties it is not definitely known when, the building was used as a girls boarding school. Its heyday however was in the middle and third quarter of the 19th century, when it was known as the Pickaway House. Many 'old timers' of Circleville remember when parties of 30 or 40 young men and women would ride to town on horseback to attend balls held there. To some it would be an all-day ride, so the ladies would carry large carpet bags containing their evening dresses on the right horn of their sidesaddles. They danced, spent the night at the hotel, and rode back home the next day.

With the era of the locomotive, business began to decline. Before this several stage coach lines ran through Circleville and the passengers stayed at the hotel at night. Farmers would need as much as a whole day to get from their farms to town and they, too, swelled the trade. But with fast transportation it was different. Farmers would come and go in the same day, and there were no stage passengers.

The hostelry continued under the name, Pickaway House, until 1909 by Mrs. Boggs. Boggs' meals became famous throughout Pickaway county and central Ohio. Two years ago the old Boggs building was torn down to make room for the new postoffice, but customers continued to take meals and rooms in the new location. But after Saturday no more food will be served.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul D. Hinton and family of Columbus, who are enjoying a two weeks' vacation at the Walter Goodman farm two miles south of Circleville, the former Nelson Hitler farm, entertained on Thursday evening at a picnic the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. James Miller and Miss Ione Mason of Columbus, Mr. and Mrs. Goodman, Mrs. Minnie McCorkle, Mrs. A. U. Brundige and Miss Katheyne L. Brundige and Mrs. Charles Brundige.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jones, Jr., visited on Friday night with his parents at Jamestown, O. On Saturday Mrs. Jones visited Mrs. Herbert Pfaltzgrof in Columbus.

Mrs. Mary Dumm of Ironton, O., was the guest of her sons, Arthur of Cedar Hill, Clarence of Meade and Fred of Kingston last week.

Mrs. O. E. Raub was the guest of Mrs. Frank Spetnagle in Chillicothe, on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ward of Circleville and Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Butts left on Sunday for a fishing trip in Michigan.

Mrs. Howard S. Boggs and daughter Marjorie Anne left on Saturday for a visit with Mrs. Caroline Smith in Chatanooga Tenn. Mr. Boggs, who is located in Rome, Georgia, will join them and all will later go to Rome for a visit. They expect to be away two weeks.

Miss Esther Young is the guest of relatives in Circleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dumm and Mrs. Mary Terry were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. David Terry and daughter Carol Anne at Cedar Hill, on Sunday.

BRIDGE SOLD FOR JUNK AT $10 PER TON

Harry Topolosky, Ashville junk dealer, Monday received a contract from county commissioners, to wreck and remove all steel of the Dry Run bridge on the Dawson-Yanketown road in Monroe township on his offer to pay the county $10 a ton for the steel.

Topolosky will wreck the bridge at the scene, removing the steel to his yard in Ashville.

The commissioners are considering plans for a new bridge to replace that wrecked by an automobile several weeks ago. Pending definite action, a temporary wooden structure is being built.

Veteran Waits 20 Years For Honorable Discharge

ROBBINSDALE, Minn., (UP)—Recently received, honorable discharge papers of Walter G. Grinols, of Robbinsdale, were 20 years late.

Grinols was discharged from the 151st Field Artillery regiment when he contracted pleurisy. At the time he received the customary $60 bonus and a blue discharge certificate on which was the statement "loyal and faithful service." The blue certificate, however, Grinols learned many years later, meant dishonorable discharge. He started action to obtain redress and after several years he received the correct papers honorably discharging him from the service.

Hack and Taxi Driver Quits After 41 Years

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., (UP)—Seventy-one-year-old Charles Dalrymple, oldest Jacksonville taxicab driver has retired after 41 years in the business.

Dalrymple opened his taxi stand in the horse and buggy days—on Nov. 25, 1899. Fares ranged from 25 to 50 cents, according to distance traveled.

Following a five-month enlistment in the Army for the Spanish-American War, Dalrymple entered into the transportation and livery service, later selling his livery stable.

In 1915 he discarded his horse and buggy for the more modern gas-operated vehicle, and piled his trade down through the years.

Although he had no idea as to the miles he has traveled during his years as a cab driver, Dalrymple does hold the long-distance record for service as a taxicab driver in this section.

She was engaged in filming Universal's "Breezing Home," the picture starting at the Grand Theatre on Wednesday, and the shooting would require several days more.

NATIONAL PARKS ON WAY TO SET TOURIST RECORD

SALT LAKE CITY (UP)—Tourist travel in the western states will exceed all previous years in volume and trade values, according to a report of the National Parks Service, which shows a 15 per cent increase in travel to the Rock Mountain national park.

The Colorado park, on U. S. highway 30, is the third national park to report considerable increase in tourist travel this year. It counted 148,017 persons visiting up to July 13, as compared with 128,420 during the same period of last year. The bulk of travel was by private automobiles.

The Utah State Automobile association predicted tourists would spend more than $2,000,000 this year in Utah in comparison with $1,500,000 for 1936.

Idaho authorities predict a 25 per cent increase in tourist spending.

BIDS ON REST ROOMS GO OVER MAXIMUM PRICE

County commissioners and councilmen, meeting in joint session Monday afternoon, declined to let the contract for construction of restrooms in the front basement of the courthouse because the bids submitted were higher than estimates fixed for the work.

Only three bids were filed, but $4,500 was asked for the complete job. The officials had set $4,000 as the maximum price to be paid for the work.

Councilmen T. M. Barnes and F. A. Marion met with the commissioners to open the bids. Since the project is being paid for co-operatively by the county and the city, it is necessary that both parties agree to any increase in the cost of the work. Barnes said after the meeting that he would seek a special session of council to decide the city's action.

Bidders told the officials Monday that the cost of materials for the work was increasing and that $4,000 was below the actual cost of the necessary labor and material.

The restrooms when completed will replace the inadequate rooms now available in the city building. Convenient entrances will be provided to the new rooms. They will be maintained by the county.

GERHARDT NOT TO CALL JURY BEFORE FALL

Several cases are pending for jury action, but, because of the harvest season and the expense involved, the session will probably be postponed until the regular September term of court.

Can of Milk Dumped To Stifle Gasoline Fire

BOZEMAN, Mont. (UP)—Ten gallons of milk saved hundreds of gallons of gasoline. The cab of Earl Hines' huge gasoline truck caught fire. With a hand-extinguisher, Hines tried to check the flames which spread to the truck's gasoline compartment under the seat.

A milk-truck driver dashed to his aid with a can of milk, which he dumped on the fire. The milk sizzled, foamed, and finally smothered the blaze.

MOST FRECKLED

SO many things have been happening lately that we almost missed the annual freckles contest at Atlantic City. Red hair and freckles used to be the bane of a kid's life, what with the nicknames, the teasing and all. But it's different these days when there are prizes for profusion of freckles.

The winner at Atlantic City was eight-year-old Helen Millbourn of Brooklyn, N. Y. Second and third were Jerry Feeney of Washington and Paul Goodman of Charleston, W. Va. Thirty-eight children competed.

Freckles are counted by a remarkable instrument called a "frecklescope". Applied to the countenance, it is said to measure the number of freckles there arrayed. Helen's face registered 1,985. Jerry's had only 1,825 and Paul's mere 1,740.

The prizes seemed to have escaped our sleuth. They may have been merely pictures in the papers. Or possibly they were medals or scrolls or salt water taffy or toy airplanes. The fame, however, is clear and comforting. No one needs to feel sad about freckles possessed on such a grand scale.

STRIKE IN PALESTINE

PALESTINE has always suffered from being one of the great crossroads of nations. Thousands of years ago armies and peoples were surging across it from Africa to Asia and Asia to Africa. It was the battleground of Egyptians, Assyrians, Babylonians and other powerful races, and later of Arabs and Turks and Europeans. Caught between all these warring forces, the Hebrews, originally invaders of Palestine themselves, have been ground for 3,000 years.

It was natural, perhaps, that the author of the New Testament Apocalypse should prophesy the end of things in a great gathering at Armageddon, (modern Megiddo) "unto the war of the great day of God, the Almighty." any a big battle has been fought there.

Now there is conflict and confusion in Palestine again, as Hebrews, persecuted and exiled in many lands, flock to their ancient home. The Arabs, distant cousins, after 1500 years of occupation, dispute the land with them, while Great Britain, as overlord under a League of Nations mandate, strives to maintain peace.

This can hardly be the last chapter. Will they fight again at Armageddon, where the new Arab and Hebrew boundaries meet?

The Supreme Court debate in the Senate may end sooner than anyone thinks. It's hard to hold an audience in midsummer.

World At A Glance

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

Editor William Allen White, in his Emporia (Kan.) Gazette, recently nominated Mayor Fiorella H. LaGuardia of New York for the leadership of a resuscitated Republican party.

This is another suggestion that just isn't logical. Mayor LaGuardia has plenty of excellent qualities. He is one of the brainiest public men in the country. He is a human dynamo. He is a radical of an exceedingly rational type. His record in congress was a brilliant one and it generally is agreed that he has given New York City a first rate administration.

He consists of the stuff that leaders are made of. But he could not possibly be the kind of leader that the G. O. P. needs at this juncture.

HE'S PRO-NEW DEAL.
 The G. O. P. has got to be an anti-New Deal party. If it is a pro-New Deal it simply is not a separate alignment. Not being a separate alignment, it could have no place, at its head, for a separate leader.

Now, LaGuardia is, in effect, a New Dealer. President Roosevelt could quite easily pick him as his choice of a successor. No matter that he has been known as a Republican. The mayor does not care a cent's worth for a party label. Once the Republicans in his Manhattan district turned him down for a renomination to congress, "Take ours," invited the Socialists. LaGuardia promptly accepted, won and served a term as a Socialist. Today he is a Republican as well as a Fusion mayor.

AS G. O. P. SEES IT
 Well, the New Dealers (they should not be confused with the old-time Democrats) are a more or less radical party.

Conservatives (most Republicans and a big group of Democrats) contend that the New Deal's trend is toward a dictatorship. Nevertheless, on the way, it seems to conservatives to be radical.

IMAGINE!
 Are conservatives, then, likely to unite on LaGuardia, a more radical radical than Roosevelt, as their leader against the latter?

And who are our conservatives? They are, of course, the bulk of the Republicans plus a sizable contingent of old-fashioned Democrats.

Imagine such an alliance behind the miscellaneous Republican-Socialist-Fusionist LaGuardia. And the only reason why he hasn't been a Democrat also is that he hasn't been urged to be one.

NOT LIKELY
 The nub of it is:
 Two new parties are indicated. President Roosevelt heads one of them. Mayor LaGuardia belongs to it.

Editor White proposes LaGuardia as leader of a party in opposition to President Roosevelt's, which LaGuardia is a member of.

WHERE IS MAN
 The new party's need (a party of old-time Republicans and old-time Democrats) is a moderately liberal leader — not a reactionary but not a vehement leftist, either.

Heaven knows where the G. O. P. will find such a candidate. He isn't visible at present.

Where the G. O. P. made its grand mistake was in not nominating Senator William E. Borah last year, old as he was. He probably would have been beaten anyway, but he would not have left his party in so forlorn a state of impotency as it is in now.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

PUTNAM SURE AMELIA SURVIVES
 WASHINGTON — Despite the Navy's official announcement that Amelia Earhart is lost, it will take a long time before her husband, George Putnam, gives up hope.

Putnam has an unshakable confidence in his wife's skill, and he has pointed out to intimate friends that if she reached one of the thousands of islands which dot the South Pacific or was picked up by a Japanese fishing boat, it would be weeks before she could communicate with the outside world. None of the fishing boats carry radio equipment, and to them a good catch of fish is more important than rescuing a mysterious stranger.

Whether Putnam's confidence is justified or not, those who have flown with Miss Earhart say that she is one of the toughest, most wiry and tireless women who ever lived, and if marooned would survive her navigator, Fred Noonan.

Miss Earhart never smoked or drank, and ate little. She had nerves like iron, and an uncanny sense of direction.

NO. 1 AVIATRIX FLOORED

Eugene Vidal, ex-Director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, and Bill Briggs of Eastern Airlines once flew with her to the Great Lakes Exposition, where they had dinner in their hotel suite. Between courses, Vidal, former West Point football star, inaugurated a series of tricks, one of which consisted of lying down backward on the floor while balancing a tumbler of water on the forehead.

The others all got a showerbath when they tried it, but Miss Earhart lay back on the floor without spilling the tumbler. In the middle of her performance, the waiter, entering, looked a bit shocked at the sight of America's No. 1 aviatrix stretched out on the floor with a glass of water on her forehead.

Another trick was turning a somersault over the back of a chair, which Miss Earhart performed with greater dexterity than the others, though once again the waiter entered just as America's No. 1 aviatrix was in a most undignified position.

Another trick was to toss pennies into a row of tumblers while blindfolded. Miss Earhart did this so well that Vidal and Briggs noiselessly moved the table (the glasses on it) farther away. But Miss Earhart, blindfolded, immediately sensed that the table had been moved, and successfully tossed the pennies at its new location.

ADVANCE PREPARATIONS

Although a superb pilot, Miss Earhart's friends say she was not as careful in her advance preparations as Colonel Lindbergh.

For instance, neither she nor Noonan was competent to send radio messages. During the Pacific flight the Coast Guard vessel Itasca several times radioed her asking her to stop using voice and use the ship's radio code channel instead. However, she kept on using voice.

A recent fight at Peiping is said to have resulted in the slaughter of about a hundred Chinese and half a dozen Japanese. Same old story. As a Chinaman once remarked to Will Rogers on a similar occasion, "Bimeby no Japanese."

DIET AND HEALTH

Contaminated Food Ills Almost Eliminated

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
 NOT MANY years ago summer was a justly dreaded time for children. The record of our grandfathers' families showed that of 10 or 13 children who were born, more than two-thirds on the average, were carried off before their fifth year, usually in the summer, from the dysenteries due to infected foods, particularly milk.

Dr. Clendening

Today our supervision of our milk supply is such that these tragedies have been almost eliminated and, in fact, our present problem is rather to reduce the high birth rate than to increase our measures of preventing infantile deaths.

No Hollywood star ever has received as much scientific advice on her diet as has been given to the leading lady in the drama of modern summer life—the American cow. Some of the most eminent dietetic experts in the world discussed the subject in Atlantic City on June 7 and 8. The high nutritional qualities of certified milk are being improved and every step in the process of milk production, from the soil, the plant, the cow, to human consumption, is thoroughly supervised.

In the delivery of clean milk to the infant, the housewife herself has some responsibility. Milk bottles left out on the doorstep too long will exude milk through the stopper, attracting insects, dogs and cats, thus contaminating the entire bottle. Dust and dirt collect on the stoppers, and every bottle top should be carefully washed and wiped before and after the stopper is removed.

Diarrhea in adults in the summer time are almost invariably due to contaminated food, and meats, popular opinion to the contrary, are more likely to be infected than vegetables. Some of the most virulent organisms do not produce any change in the odor of the food they contaminate.

The treatment of summer diarrhea, either in infant or adult, is largely dietary. A preliminary period of starvation is always advisable, however, is important and should be done by mouth. This is particularly true of infants after the starvation period, which should last 12 to 24 hours. The first food should be simple, such as warm weak tea, broth, bouillon, buttermilk, lemonade. Ginger ale is always very acceptable and apparently beneficial. It reduces nausea, as well as furnishing considerable nutrition. Proteins, such as soft-boiled eggs and scraped meat, are better tolerated than vegetables for several days.

The diet should be increased a few items at a time, adding milk, custards, soups, mashed potatoes, before such roughage vegetables as beans, peas or lettuce, tomatoes, etc., are used.

Drugs are not used very much. If there is discomfort, paregoric is valuable, and the dosage can be adjusted very carefully, drop by drop, to the requirements of the case.

Whether the use of castor oil is simply adding insult to injury, or whether it cleans out the offensive material, is a matter of opinion.

RUSTLE OF SILKS

READ THIS FIRST:
 Ambitious to become a dress designer, Mary Barrett accidentally meets Tony Castle, owner of a smart New York dress shop. After examining some of her sketches, he offers her a job. They see more and more of one another and begin to fall in love. During the absence of Francine Long, Tony's head buyer who dislikes Mary, the latter successfully designs some gowns for an important client, Liane Weston, a leading actress.
 (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 7
 MARY BARRETT thought that June 27 was the longest day she had ever lived. She didn't know that it was to be one of the most important days in her life.

On her calendar pad there was a small note:

Weston costumes to be ready for final try-on.

Five p. m.

At 3 o'clock, Sadie, one of the sewing room slaves, poked her head into Mary's studio.

"Miss Barrett, two of the things are ready," she said.

Had it been an unveiling, Mary could not have been more thrilled than she was when she looked at the breath-taking negligee. The turquoise beauty of it with flashes of silver, falling down like the wings of a sea bird.

She turned from that to the sable and saffron gown. The touch of the soft chiffon, the incredibly rich fur made her fingertips tingle.

"Where's the black one?" she asked. Her gown.

"Mrs. Long is finishing it," she was told.

"Let me know when it is ready," she went back to her studio office and closed the door back of her.

She wanted to savor the moment that was coming—the moment that was hers and yet not hers.

The credit was to be Francine Long's. For all that, since that day nearly two weeks ago when Liane Weston had approved the designs, Mary had literally slaved over them. It was Mary who was at the shop early and late, working over muslins, running to the home of the convalescent Francine for her approval and assistance.

If Francine was jealous of the younger girl, or if she thought that Mary had done a notable thing, she gave no sign of either. Francine was a machine operating for the shop and for that Mary was glad.

Francine did not come back to the shop until two days before the costumes were to be completed and in the meantime, Mary had worked out all the muslin patterns and made duplicates for herself to keep and study her own work later.

Then Tony, embarrassed, kindly, and a little worried, had said, "Mary, do you mind keeping very much in the background for this one time? You know Liane is temperamental and perhaps it would be better all around if she thought that . . . well, that a more recognized designer had done them."

"That's all right," Mary had answered generously. "All I care about is getting the job done right."

And now it was done. Promptly at 5 o'clock, Liane stepped out of her foreign car. Mary saw her and fled to the workroom where she could see without being seen.

Her eyes danced as she peered through the velvet curtains separating the workroom from the salon. Liane, in the saffron gown, paraded there. Liane's clear voice easily penetrated the curtains.

"It's enchanting, Tony!" she pronounced while her famous hands caressed the lines that dissolved her hips. "I don't want the slightest change in it. Now for the negligee."

While Liane walked slowly before them in the turquoise and silver loveliness, Mary's eyes were on Tony. Her own heart leaped painfully with the happiness and triumph that filled it when she saw his face.

"How about the black dress?" Francine Long walked with the actress out of Mary's hearing and into a dressing room.

She waved aside the maid who attempted to help the actress into the black gown. "Let me help you," she offered and lifted the gown over the actress head.

"Pulling it on, Francine said, 'Miss Weston, I'm terribly happy that you are so pleased. I'm so happy that I can forget my own disappointment. You know I didn't design them; they were turned over to a little artist in the shop.'"

"Didn't you?" Liane asked, struggling into the clinging frock. It mattered little to her who had done them so long as they were so perfect.

"I'm mad about this one," she added from within the folds of crepe.

Francine fastened the last of the hooks and stood off. Liane Weston didn't look into the mirror at first. She was staring instead at the expression of shocked surprise on Francine's face. She didn't see the gleam in Francine's narrowed eyes.

Then she turned and looked in the mirror. Saw the angular lines the gown gave her figure, the cruel, stark brutality of it. Then she opened her mouth and shrieked!

Mary heard the tumult that followed. Liane's voice, angry, in a trade. Tony's placating. The dreadful thought struck her: Something went wrong with the black gown!

She waited for the nightmare to come upon her. It did.

Because it sickened her deep in her heart, she tried not to hear what was said in that back room a few minutes later. There was Tony, furious, out of control with himself, shouting that he had been a fool to trust an untried girl.

There was more . . . and more. There was Francine, calm, expressionless save for that steely, smiling light in her eyes. There were fitters, cutters, seamstresses explaining that they'd followed the patterns. Mary had made the patterns.

She sat there long after the others had left for the night, perplexed, forlorn, with her hopes crumbled about her head and the discarded black gown thrown contemptuously on a cutting table.

"You still here?" It was her friend, the model, Louise. "Cheer up, kid. Don't mind the boss."

visit with relatives. This gave Joe his chance. He called up his pals, Dauber, Blotch and company, who are house painters by trade, but have gone high hat and call themselves pigmenticians.

MOST FRECKLED
SO many things have been happening lately that we almost missed the annual freckles contest at Atlantic City. Red hair and freckles used to be the bane of a kid's life, what with the nicknames, the teasing and all. But it's different these days when there are prizes for profusion of freckles.
The winner at Atlantic City was eight-year-old Helen Millbouer of Brooklyn, N. Y. Second and third were Jerry Feeney of Washington and Paul Goodman of Charleston, W. Va. Thirty-eight children competed.
Freckles are counted by a remarkable instrument called a "frecklescope". Applied to the countenance, it is said to measure the number of freckles there arrayed. Helen's face registered 1,985. Jerry's had only 1,825 and Paul's mere 1,740.
The prizes seemed to have escaped our sleuth. They may have been merely pictures in the papers. Or possibly they were medals or scrolls or salt water taffy or toy airplanes. The fame, however, is clear and comforting. No one needs to feel sad about freckles possessed on such a grand scale.

STRIFE IN PALESTINE
PALESTINE has always suffered from being one of the great crossroads of nations. Thousands of years ago armies and peoples were surging across it from Africa to Asia and Asia to Africa. It was the battleground of Egyptians, Assyrians, Babylonians and other powerful races, and later of Arabs and Turks and Europeans. Caught between all these warring forces, the Hebrews, originally invaders of Palestine themselves, have been ground for 3,000 years.
It was natural, perhaps, that the author of the New Testament Apocalypse should prophesy the end of things in a great gathering at Armageddon, (modern Megiddo) "unto the war of the great day of God, the Almighty," any a big battle has been fought there.

Now there is conflict and confusion in Palestine again, as Hebrews, persecuted and exiled in many lands, flock to their ancient home. The Arabs, distant cousins, after 1500 years of occupation, dispute the land with them, while Great Britain, as overlord under a League of Nations mandate, strives to maintain peace.

This can hardly be the last chapter. Will they fight again at Armageddon, where the new Arab and Hebrew boundaries meet?

The Supreme Court debate in the Senate may end sooner than anyone thinks. It's hard to hold an audience in midsummer.

World At A Glance

Editor William Allen White, in his Emporia (Kan.) Gazette, recently nominated Mayor Fiorella H. LaGuardia of New York for the leadership of a resuscitated Republican party.
This is another suggestion that just isn't logical.
Mayor La Guardia has plenty of excellent qualities. He is one of the brainiest public men in the country. He is a human dynamo. He is a radical of an exceedingly rational type. His record in congress was a brilliant one and he generally is agreed that he has given New York City a first rate administration.
He consists of the stuff that leaders are made of.
But he could not possibly be the kind of leader that the G. O. P. needs at this juncture.

HE'S PRO-NEW DEAL
The G. O. P. has got to be an anti-New Deal party. If it is a pro-New Deal it simply is not a separate alignment. Not being a separate alignment, it could have no place, at its head, for a separate leader.
Now, La Guardia is, in effect, a New Dealer.
President Roosevelt could quite consistently pick him as his choice

PUTNAM SURE AMELIA SURVIVES
WASHINGTON — Despite the Navy's official announcement that Amelia Earhart is lost, it will take a long time before her husband, George Putnam, gives up hope.

Putnam has an unshakable confidence in his wife's skill, and he has pointed out to intimate friends that if she reached one of the thousands of islands which dot the South Pacific or was picked up by a Japanese fishing boat, it would be weeks before she could communicate with the outside world. None of the fishing boats carry radio equipment, and to them a good catch of fish is more important than rescuing a mysterious stranger.

Whether Putnam's confidence is justified or not, those who have flown with Miss Earhart say that she is one of the toughest, most wiry and tireless women who ever lived, and if marooned would survive her navigator, Fred Noonan.

Miss Earhart never smoked or drank, and ate little. She had nerves like iron, and an uncanny sense of direction.

NO. 1 AVIATRIX FLOORED

Eugene Vidal, ex-Director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, and Bill Briggs of Eastern Airlines once flew with her to the Great Lakes Exposition, where they had dinner in their hotel suite. Between courses, Vidal, former West Point football star, inaugurated a series of tricks, one of which consisted of lying down backward on the floor while balancing a tumbler of water on the forehead.

The others all got a showerbath when they tried it, but Miss Earhart lay back on the floor without spilling the tumbler. In the middle of her performance, the waiter, entering, looked a bit shocked at the sight of America's No. 1 aviatrix stretched out on the floor with a glass of water on her forehead.

Another trick was turning a somersault over the back of a chair, which Miss Earhart performed with greater dexterity than the others, though once again the waiter entered just as America's No. 1 aviatrix was in a most undignified position.

Another trick was to toss pennies into a row of tumblers while blindfolded. Miss Earhart did this so well that Vidal and Briggs noiselessly moved the table (the glasses on it) farther away. But Miss Earhart, blindfolded, immediately sensed that the table had been moved, and successfully tossed the pennies at its new location.

ADVANCE PREPARATIONS

Although a superb pilot, Miss Earhart's friends say she was not as careful in her advance preparations as Colonel Lindbergh.

For instance, neither she nor Noonan was competent to send radio messages. During the Pacific flight the Coast Guard vessel Itasca several times radioed her asking her to stop using voice and use the ship's radio code channel instead. However, she kept on using voice.

A recent fight at Peiping is said to have resulted in the slaughter of about a hundred Chinese and half a dozen Japanese. Same old story. As a Chinaman once remarked to Will Rogers on a similar occasion, "Bimeby no Japanese."

of a successor. No matter that he has been known as a Republican. The mayor does not care a cent's worth for a party label. Once the Republicans in his Manhattan district turned him down for a renomination to congress. "Take ours," invited the Socialists. La Guardia promptly accepted, won and served a term as a Socialist. Today he is a Republican as well as a Fusion mayor.

AS G. O. P. SEES IT
Well, the New Dealers (they should not be confused with the old-time Democrats) are a more or less radical party.

Conservatives (most Republicans and a big group of Democrats) contend that the New Deal's trend is toward a dictatorship. Nevertheless, on the way, it seems to conservatives to be radical.

IMAGINE!
Are conservatives, then, likely to unite on La Guardia, a more radical radical than Roosevelt, as their leader against the latter? And who are our conservatives? They are, of course, the bulk of the Republicans plus a sizable contingent of old-fashioned Democrats.

DIET AND HEALTH

Contaminated Food Ills Almost Eliminated

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
NOT MANY years ago summer was a justly dreaded time for children. The record of our grandfathers' families showed that of 10 or 13 children who were born, more than two-thirds on the average, were carried off before their fifth year, usually in the summer, from the dysenteries due to infected foods, particularly milk. Today our supervision of our milk supply is such that these tragedies have been almost eliminated and, in fact, our present problem is rather to reduce the high birth rate than to increase our measures of preventing infantile deaths.

No Hollywood star ever has received as much scientific advice on her diet as has been given to the leading lady in the drama of modern summer life—the American cow. Some of the most eminent dietetic experts in the world discussed the subject in Atlantic City on June 7 and 8. The high nutritional qualities of certified milk are being improved and every step in the process of milk production, from the soil, the plant, the cow, to human consumption, is thoroughly canvassed.

In the delivery of clean milk to the infant, the housewife herself has some responsibility. Milk bottles left out on the doorstep too long will exude milk through the stopper, attracting insects, dogs and cats, thus contaminating the entire bottle. Dust and dirt collect on the stoppers, and every bottle top should be carefully washed and wiped before and after the stopper is removed.

Diarrheas in adults in the summer time are almost invariably due to contaminated food, and meats, popular opinion to the contrary, are more likely to be infected than vegetables. Some of the most virulent organisms do not produce any change in the odor of the food they contaminate.

The treatment of summer diarrhea, either in infant or adult, is largely dietary. A preliminary period of starvation is always advisable. The administration of fluids, however, is important and should be done by mouth. This is particularly true of infants after the starvation period, which should last 12 to 24 hours. The first food should be simple, such as warm weak tea, broth, bouillon, buttermilk, lemonade. Ginger ale is always very acceptable and apparently beneficial. It reduces nausea, as well as furnishing considerable nutrition. Proteins, such as soft-boiled eggs and scraped meat, are better tolerated than vegetables for several days.

The diet should be increased a few items at a time, adding milk, custards, soups, mashed potatoes, beans, peas or lettuce, tomatoes, etc., are used.

Drugs are not used very much. If there is discomfort, paregoric is valuable, and the dosage can be adjusted very carefully, drop by drop, to the requirements of the case.

Whether the use of castor oil is simply adding insult to injury or whether it cleans out the offensive material, is a matter of opinion.

RUSTLE OF SILKS By Marie Sigard

READ THIS FIRST:
Ambitious to become a dress designer, Mary Barrett accidentally meets Tony Castle, owner of a smart New York dress shop. After examining some of her sketches, he offers her a job. They see more and more of one another and begin to fall in love. During the absence of Francine Long, Tony's head buyer who dislikes Mary, the latter successfully designs some gowns for an important client, Liane Weston, a leading actress. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 7
MARY BARRETT thought that June 27 was the longest day she had ever lived. She didn't know that it was to be one of the most important days in her life.

On her calendar past there was a small note:
Weston costumes to be ready for final try-on.
Five p. m.

At 3 o'clock, Sadie, one of the sewing room slaves, poked her head into Mary's studio.
"Miss Barrett, two of the things are ready," she said.

Had it been an unveiling, Mary could not have been more thrilled than she was when she looked at the breath-taking negligee. The turquoise beauty of it with flashes of silver circling down like the wings of a sea bird.

She turned from that to the sable and saffron gown. The touch of the soft chiffon, the incredibly rich fur made her fingertips tingle.
"Where's the black one?" she asked. Her gown.

"Mrs. Long is finishing it," she was told.
"Let me know when it is ready." She went back to her studio office and closed the door back of her. She wanted to savor the moment that was coming—the moment that was hers and yet not hers.

The credit was to be Francine Long's. For all that, since that day nearly two weeks ago when Liane Weston had approved the designs, Mary had literally slaved over them. It was Mary who was at the shop early and late, working over muslins, running to the home of the convalescing Francine for her approval and assistance.

If Francine was jealous of the younger girl, or if she thought that Mary had done a notable thing, she gave no sign of either. Francine was a machine operating for the shop and for that Mary was glad.

Francine did not come back to the shop until two days before the costumes were to be completed and in the meantime, Mary had worked out all the muslin patterns and made duplicates for herself to keep and study her own work later.

Then Tony, embarrassed, kindly, and a little worried, had said, "Mary, do you mind keeping very much in the background for this one time? You know Liane is temperamental and perhaps it would be better all around if she thought that . . . well, that a more recognized designer had done them."

"That's all right," Mary had answered generously. "All I care about is getting the job done right."

And now it was done.
Promptly at 5 o'clock, Liane stepped out of her foreign car. Mary saw her and fled to the room where she could see without being seen.

Her eyes danced as she peered through the velvet curtains separating the workroom from the salon. Liane, in the saffron gown, paraded there. Liane's clear voice easily penetrated the curtains.

"It's enchanting, Tony!" she pronounced while her famous hands caressed the lines that dissolved her hips. "I don't want the slightest change in it. Now for the negligee."

While Liane walked slowly before her in the turquoise and silver loveliness, Mary's eyes were on Tony. Her own heart leaped painfully with the happiness and triumph that filled it when she saw his face.

"How about the black dress?" Francine Long walked with the across out of Mary's hearing and into a dressing room.

She waved aside the maid who attempted to help the actress into the black gown. "Let me help you," she offered and lifted the gown over the actress' head.

Pulling it on, Francine said, "Miss Weston, I'm terribly happy that you are so pleased. I'm so happy that I can forget my own disappointment. You know I didn't design them; they were turned over to a little artist in the shop."

"Didn't you?" Liane asked, struggling into the clinging frock. It mattered little to her who had done them so long as they were so perfect.

"I'm mad about this one," she added from within the folds of crepe.

Francine fastened the last of the hooks and stood off. Liane Weston didn't look into the mirror at first. She was staring instead at the expression of shocked surprise on Francine's face. She didn't see the gleam in Francine's narrowed eyes.

Then she turned and looked in the mirror. Saw the angular lines the gown gave her figure, the cruel, stark brutality of it. Then she opened her mouth and shrieked!

Mary heard the tumult that followed. Liane's voice, angry, in a tirade; Tony's placating. The dreadful thought struck her: Something went wrong with the black gown!

She waited for the nightmare to come upon her. It did.
Because it sickened her deep in her heart, she tried not to hear what was said in that back room a few minutes later. There was Tony, furious, out of control with himself, shouting that he had been a fool to trust an untried girl. There was more . . . and more.

There was Francine, calm, expressionless save for that steely, smiling light in her eyes. There were fitters, cutters, seamstresses explaining that they'd followed the patterns. Mary had made the patterns.

She sat there long after the others had left for the night, perplexed, forlorn, with her hopes crumbled about her and the discarded black gown thrown contemptuously on a cutting table.

"You still here?" It was her friend, the model, Louise. "Cheer up, kid. Don't mind the boss."

White Tailored Costume Liked in Smart Circles

Midsummer ensemble of white linen with lace blouse

By LISBETH

WHITE is registering importantly in Paris as well as on this side of the water for these warm summer days.

White was seen many times on the recent Grand Prix day—a high spot in the Paris season. A great many well dressed women were present who divided the spectator's attention with the horses who were picked to win.

Patou designed this tailored suit of white linen that is worn with a white lace blouse. The pattern of the lace is one of the many interesting lace designs that are to be seen this season, and is the main interest of the blouse, which otherwise is very simple, with long sleeves and turnover, pointed collar.

The jacket of the suit is also smartly tailored, and a panama hat is worn with the costume.

New Evening Hat

A clever little evening hat worn in Paris is worth noting. It is a mob cap, almost as small as a calot or skull cap, and made of tulle with a frill of the same all around it and a chin strap. It is most effective.

Short jackets of lace are worn a great deal, and one costume with a three-quarter coat was very striking. The dress was severely tailored black lace with the coat in blue patterned lace on black fringe.

Lace dresses that you see on the avenues range all the way from all black tailored costumes to fairly bright blues, violets and reds. This type of dress is usually quite simple and in no way looks out of place on the street. It is a good packer, not given to wrinkling, and so often is chosen by tourists. This type of lace dress also serves for more formal occasions than the ordinary daytime dress and so does double duty on occasion.

Lace is to be recommended for town frocks for hot weather. The style best suited to this kind of wear is light or pastel in color or navy. A turquoise lace dress, for instance, with gored skirt, short, full sleeves, and V neckline edged in brown, and with a brown taffeta sash and brown daisies at the neck, is practical and pretty as well.

White Tailored Costume Liked in Smart Circles

Midsummer ensemble of white linen with lace blouse

By LISBETH

WHITE is registering importantly in Paris as well as on this side of the water for these warm summer days.

White was seen many times on the recent Grand Prix day—a high spot in the Paris season. A great many well dressed women were present who divided the spectators' attention with the horses who were picked to win.

Patou designed this tailored suit of white linen that is worn with a white lace blouse. The pattern of the lace is one of the many interesting lace designs that are to be seen this season, and is the main interest of the blouse, which otherwise is very simple, with long sleeves and turnover, pointed collar.

The jacket of the suit is also smartly tailored, and a Panama hat is worn with the costume.

New Evening Hat

A clever little evening hat worn in Paris is worth noting. It is a mob cap, almost as small as a calot or skull cap, and made of tulle with a frill of the same all around it and a chin strap. It is most effective.

Short jackets of lace are worn a great deal, and one costume with a three-quarter coat was very striking. The dress was severely tailored black lace with the coat in blue patterned lace on black frills.

Lace dresses that you see on the avenues range all the way from all black tailored costumes to fairly bright blues, violets white and reds. This type of dress is usually quite simple and in no way looks out of place on the street. It is a good packer, not given to wrinkling, and so often is chosen by tourists. This type of lace dress also serves for more formal occasions than the ordinary daytime dress and so does double duty on occasion.

Lace is to be recommended for town frocks for hot weather. The style best suited to this kind of wear is light or pastel in color or navy. A turquoise lace dress, for instance, with gored skirt, short, full sleeves, and V neckline edged in brown, and with a brown taffeta sash and brown daisies at the neck, is practical and pretty as well.

DAVIS TROPHY READY FOR DELIVERY TO AMERICANS AT WIMBLEDON.

BUDGE WIPES UP COURT

Californian Has Not Lost
A Match In Wimbledon
Contest Series

WIMBLEDON, July 27.—(UP)—The Davis cup, a huge silver trophy emblematic of international tennis supremacy, seemed ready for delivery to the United States today.

Only one victory against England in the remaining two matches of the challenge round series was needed to send the cup back to America and wipe out all the failures and disappointments since France's famed "Three Musketeers" lifted it in Germantown, Pa., back in 1927. England has held the cup since 1933 when it won it from France.

Even the most ardent of British supporters admitted that only a miracle could keep the cup here. The United States had a commanding 2-1 lead in the best three-out-of-five series as play began on Wimbledon's famed center court.

In the opening encounter, Frankie Parker, 21-year-old Springfield, N. J., stylist faced left-handed Charley Hare of England. The final battle involved J. Donald Budge, the California red-head who personally has carried America to the threshold of success, and Henry Wilfred (Bunny) Austin, No. 1 player of the English side.

The English hoped Parker would lose to Hare which would square the series. Then it would be up to Austin to beat Budge and keep the cup here. Some Americans also favored a Hare victory because Budge then would have an opportunity to clinch the cup, a fitting climax to one of the greatest foreign campaigns ever conducted by an American.

Since he led America to a 5-0 sweep over Japan in the opening round of the North American zone series, Budge has not lost a Davis cup match. He scored two singles victories and teamed with Gene Mako of Los Angeles to win the doubles in the 5-0 sweep over Australia in the North American zone finals. He did the same against Germany in the Inter-zone finals which America won 3-2 last week. In that series, with the team score 2-2 and trailing two sets to nothing, Budge reeled off the last three sets to score the clinching victory over Baron Gottfried Von Cramm.

Even the great Fred Perry, who was responsible for England's cup

BRIGHT STAGE
SET FOR ALL
STAR CONTEST

COLUMBUS, July 27.—(UP)—With a "world series" setting the fourth annual American Association All-Star contest will be played here tonight.

By virtue of their hold on first place on July 15, the Columbus Red Birds gained the right to entertain the game. They will meet an All-Star team selected from the rosters of the other seven clubs in the league.

Tonight's contest will mark the first time the all-star battle has been played under the lights and the initial time in which a team in the eastern half of the league has been the host club.

Morton Cooper, the fast ball specialist of the Columbus club, was expected to be the Red Birds starting pitcher. Manager Burt Shotton said there was a possibility he might use all other members of his hurling corps for one inning each so as not to disrupt his assignments in championship contests.

Forest Pressnell, Milwaukee; Charley Wagner, Minneapolis; and Alta Cohen, Toledo, were expected to share the mound burden for the all-stars.

A number of baseball notables including Ford Frick, president of the National league; William Hargrave, president of the American league; and Judge W. G. Bramham, president of the National Association of Professional baseball leagues, were expected to attend the game.

The contest was expected to draw a near capacity crowd of 17,000 fans.

Victory over France in 1933 and whose desertion of amateur ranks last year seems almost certain to cost England the cup, never did that.

Yesterday, Budge teamed with Mako and sent America ahead with a 6-3, 7-5, 7-9, 12-10 triumph over Charles Tuckey and Frank Wilde in the doubles.

Should America take the cup today, it would be the third time the United States has triumphed on foreign soil and the second time it has won the trophy from England.

The United States won the series in 1900—the year that Dwight W. Davis offered the trophy. It lost it in 1903 to a team known as the British Isle. Then in 1913, it won the cup from England at Wimbledon in the days of Maurice McLaughlin and R. Norris Williams.

INDIANS DOWN TOLEDO

Milwaukee Wins From St.
Paul, Keltner Blasting
Pair of Homers

BY UNITED PRESS
Minneapolis was out in front in the American Association race by two full games today by virtue of an 11-3 victory from Kansas City and a layoff by Columbus to prepare for the all-star game.

The Millers started out with a four-run lead off John Niggeling in the first inning. The Blues managed to drive Jim Henry to cover in the fourth but Grabowski pitched tight ball the rest of the game.

He allowed only two hits in five and a half innings, and in the last four innings faced only 12 batters.

Indianapolis defeated Toledo 6-4. Pitcher Lloyd Johnson led Toledo down with only six hits. Toledo used three pitchers. Nelson was credited with the loss.

Milwaukee won 8-5 from St. Paul. Keltner led the batting attack with two homers and a double for Milwaukee, sending four runs in.

Milner allowed eight hits and struck out ten batters in winning. Herring was the losing pitcher.

Columbus and Louisville were idle, having met at an earlier date.

FAMOUS RACE
HORSE TRACED TO CIRCLEVILLE

That Circleville was the birth place of Zombrower, 2:04½, grandam of the great horse, Greyhound, was disclosed this week in an article written for "The Harness Horse", monthly publication, by H. Gardner Duffy, of Cleveland, a native of Circleville.

Zack Brewer, another Circleville native, owned Zombrower, Duffy writes. Greyhound's third and fourth dams, Mary Bales, 2:26½, and Molly J., were owned in Circleville, too, by Jesse Jones.

Greyhound, with a mark of 1:59½ over the historic Goshen, N. Y. track, is regarded as the master harness horse of the century. He was handled by Sep Palin, a veteran of the track, in his history-making run.

Greyhound was sent on the Goshen track last week to beat the previous record of 2:02½, and he did it with ease. His first eighth was clocked in 15 seconds and the half was negotiated in 29½ seconds. The three-quarters time was 1:30½.

PROBE LOOMING ON GAMING OF
BALL PLAYERS

ST. LOUIS, July 27.—(UP)—The St. Louis Star-Times said today that Judge Keneasaw M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, planned an investigation into gambling on the part of major league baseball players.

According to the Star-Times, Judge Landis, in a telephone conversation from his office in Chicago, said he would "go to the bottom" of gambling reports. The investigation, the paper said, was an aftermath to the release of Rogers Hornsby as manager of the Browns of the American league last week.

Hornsby's two-year contract, calling for $20,000 per year for 1937 and 1938 was terminated suddenly by President Donald L. Barnes of the Browns. Later Hornsby surrendered the contract for approximately $7,000. Hornsby said that betting on horse races caused his release. He denied, however, that betting on the races ever interfered with his baseball duties. "It was Rogers Hornsby's idea of enjoying himself," he said.

Judge Landis intimated that he might summon Milton (Alabama) Delmas, clubhouse boy for the Browns, as a witness. Delmas was quoted first as saying he had placed bets for many players, including umpires. Later he denied that he had ever placed a bet for anyone.

There are approximately 800 bookmakers in St. Louis and some are located in the vicinity of Sportsman's park.

Landis was quoted as saying "I'll have to roll up my sleeves and go to work on this one, if reports of Delmas running bets for players are true."

Farr Talks Too Well
Tells of Terrible Fight
He'll Beat Joe Louis

By BILL BRAUCHER

The feeling growing in this corner that the customers who want to see Tommy Farr in a vertical position on the night of Aug. 26 in Yankee stadium had better get there early . . . and keep their eyes glued on Louis and Farr when they step to the center of the ring for the first few punches. . . . Having just returned from looking over the Welsh wonder, and getting a load of his chatter, it strikes me that here is a guy tailor-made for the Bomber to bust into a million pieces with one lusty wallop.

Farr has been exercising his tonsils no end since setting foot to these shores . . . Mushky Jackson says its his shoulder blades he should be training instead of his vocal cords . . . that's my guess, too . . . he talks too good a fight to suit me . . . Tummus says 'ell defend the bloom'n' title three times after he wins it from Louis . . . then retire undefeated . . . furthermore, Louis is slow, most unclever, lacks experience . . . and he has seen the Bomber in the movies and knows how to beat him . . . also, once when he was 10 years old he saw two men battle on a mountain near his native heath (Tonypanydy, Wales) . . . and they fought so long and so hard that finally their legs folded, so the spectators dug holes and placed the two combatants upright therein so they could carry on . . . It's just a tophole yarn . . . I'd say typical of British heavyweights to have to prop themselves up, eh wot?

"Why should I be afraid of Louis?" asks Tummus. "He's not abnormal, is he (you'd be surprised)? He is just another fighter with two arms, two legs (that's all Dempsey had, too). "I am a born fighter and the son of a fighter (are you sure your old man wasn't Cicero)? Sometimes I have fought as many as five fights a night (you're about to be promoted)."

And so on and on . . . Tommy says he found it hard to get along in England as a fighter because he was "not Eton", and if he "were Eton" it would have been easy . . . he ought to get along handily with Joe Louis . . . Joe isn't Eton, eyther, Tummus, old pot o' tea . . . One of the boys asked Farr why he didn't knock out Max Baer . . . Farr replied he didn't want to . . . "Put yourself in my place. I had come up hand over hand, with nobody believing in me, and now I was in the ring with a man over whom victory would be sweet to me. I had no fear of his right, and after the first round I knew just how to fight him. I found I was winning easily from Baer. So I didn't want to take a chance by trying to knock him out" . . . in other words, Tummus wasn't afraid of Baer's punch but didn't want to get hit with it, by George.

Farr beat Bob Olin, a light haevyweight, not so long ago, and one of the boys asked him what he thought of Olin . . . all hands were bowled over a bit by Tummus' reply to the effect that Olin certainly was one of the hardest hitters he ever had been matched with . . . Olin a puncher? . . . Old Tummus hasn't seen anything yet!

MONTANEZ IN LINE FOR TILT
WITH CHAMPION

HOLLYWOOD, July 27.—(UP)—Pedro Montanez, Puerto Rican youth, today had a clear road to a lightweight championship bout with Lew Ambers, after knocking out Wesley Ramey of Grand Rapids, Mich., in the first round last night.

Montanez, rugged, cruel-hitting, hasn't lost a fight in six years. He put Ramey away in two minutes, 40 seconds of the first round after a dynamite left hook exploded on Ramey's chin.

Ramey was trying to pull himself to his knees when Referee Jack Dempsey counted him out. Montanez weighed in at 126½, Ramey at 135.

Montanez has signed to meet Ambers for the title in the fall.

ARMY LOSES 3-0
Lundy Ferguson pitched two-hit ball for the Battery Co. team in the Tri-County softball loop Monday evening, but lost to the Circleville Athletic club 3 to 9. Purcell was the C.A.C. hurler. In field errors, caused by a revised lineup, resulted in the loss.

SECURITY BOARD FIGHTS ERRORS

WASHINGTON (UP)—Commercial and industrial employers throughout the country have been cautioned by the Social Security board to get the right number when listing employees on the information reports.

Under Treasury regulations, LeRoy Hodges, director of the bureau of Federal old-age benefits, explained, employers must list employee account numbers on their information reports. Post-offices are asking that if an employee has failed to report his social security number, the employer should file an application form with sufficient supporting information to establish the employee's identity beyond reasonable doubt.

There is always the possibility of mistakes, Hodges pointed out, if employers merely submit lists of names to postoffices, to check against files in the hope of immediately finding out what account numbers had been assigned. Without sufficient information to identify the employee in question, the wrong number may be obtained and the resulting mistakes will prove costly to the entire program, Hodges said.

Hodges urged all employers who have not yet reported their social security account numbers to their employers to do so promptly. This applies also to those who have worked for more than one employer since Jan. 1, 1937, even though the period of their employment may have been one day or less.

Account numbers were issued to workers through the facilities of more than 45,000 postoffices which were utilized in the assignment of account numbers until June 30. Starting July 1, and thereafter, application forms for account numbers are obtained at any local postoffice, and at regional and field offices of the board. However, the assigning of account numbers will be made by the board through field offices, Hodges explained.

MINNESOTA PIKE
GET UNIVERSITY
METAL 'DEGREES'

DULUTH, Minn. (UP)—Swimming around somewhere in Northern Minnesota lakes are 3,000 wall-eye pikes possessing "degrees" from the University of Minnesota.

The fish are wearing tin, waterproof plates, showing they attended the university's school for fish, conducted recently near Lake Winnebago.

And the fish didn't learn a thing—not even how not to get caught, but they are expected to teach naturalists how far pike travel and disclose their ultimate fate.

Prof. Samuel C. Eddy, aided by the state game and fish division and the U. S. forestry service, locked narrow metal strips, stamped "U. of Minn." to the jaws of 3,000 pike. Anglers catching the fish so marked are asked to communicate with Eddy.

Female fish were excluded from the school. Males were lured to class and tagged.

MICHIGAN SETS
ASIDE ARCHERS'
HUNTING DATES

LANSING, Mich. (UP)—Michigan will have a special open season on deer and bear for bow-and-arrow hunters this fall.

P. J. Hoffmaster, conservation director, said the archers will be required to purchase a special license to try their luck with "big game."

The 1937 Michigan legislature passed an act, which was signed by Gov. Frank Murphy, providing for a bow-and-arrow season on deer and bear from Nov. 1 to 14, inclusive, which will be followed Nov. 15 by the opening of the regular deer season.

Archers may shoot deer or bear in Isosco and Newago counties without competition from rifle hunters. Each bow-and-arrow hunter will be limited to one antlered deer, whose antlers are not less than 3 inches above the skull, and one bear. Possession of firearms by archers will be prohibited.

Canadian Liquor Flow
To U. S. Remains Steady

OTTAWA, Ont. (UP)—Reopening of American distilleries has had little effect on the exports of Canadian liquor to the United States, it is revealed.

Trade figures available here show that Canada has exported 12,000,000 gallons of liquor to the United States since the Volstead Act was repealed, and the movement is continuing at the rate of approximately 500,000 gallons per month.

DAVIS TROPHY READY FOR DELIVERY TO AMERICANS AT WIMBLEDON

ONLY MIRACLE CAN KEEP CUP ACROSS OCEAN

U. S. Has Commanding Lead And Requires Only One More Victory

BUDGE WIPES UP COURT

Californian Has Not Lost A Match In Wimbledon Contest Series

WIMBLEDON, July 27.—(UP)—The Davis cup, a huge silver trophy emblematic of international tennis supremacy, seemed ready for delivery to the United States today.

Only one victory against England in the remaining two matches of the challenge round series was needed to send the cup back to America and wipe out all the failures and disappointments since France's famed "Three Musketeers" lifted it in Germantown, Pa., back in 1927. England has held the cup since 1933 when it won it from France.

Even the most ardent of British supporters admitted that only a miracle could keep the cup here. The United States had a commanding 2-1 lead in the best three-out-of-five series as play began on Wimbledon's famed center court. In the opening encounter, Frankie Parker, 21-year-old Spring Lake N. J., stylist faced left-handed Charley Hare of England. The final battle involved J. Donald Budge, the California red-head who personally has carried America to the threshold of success, and Henry Wilfred (Bunny) Austin, No. 1 player of the English side.

The English hoped Parker would lose to Hare which would square the series. Then it would be up to Austin to beat Budge and keep the cup here. Some Americans also favored a Hare victory because Budge then would have an opportunity to clinch the cup, a fitting climax to one of the greatest foreign campaigns ever conducted by an American.

Since he led America to a 5-0 sweep over Japan in the opening round of the North American zone series, Budge has not lost a Davis cup match. He scored two singles victories and teamed with Gene Mako of Los Angeles to win the doubles in the 5-0 sweep over Australia in the North American zone finals. He did the same against Germany in the inter-zone finals which America won 3-2 last week. In that series, with the team score 2-2 and trailing two sets to nothing, Budge reeled off the last three sets to score the clinching victory over Baron Gottfried Von Cramm.

MILLERS DROP KANSAS CITY, INCREASE LEAD

Birds Lay Off to Prepare For All-Star Game at Columbus Tuesday

INDIANS DOWN TOLEDO

Milwaukee Wins From St. Paul, Keltner Blasting Pair of Homers

BY UNITED PRESS Minneapolis was out in front in the American Association race by two full games today by virtue of an 11-3 victory from Kansas City and a layoff by Columbus to prepare for the all-star game.

The Millers started out with a four-run lead off John Niggeling in the first inning. The Blues managed to drive Jim Henry to cover in the fourth but Grabowski pitched tight ball the rest of the game.

He allowed only two hits in five and a half innings, and in the last four innings faced only 12 batters.

Indianapolis defeated Toledo 6-4. Pitcher Lloyd Johnson let Toledo down with only six hits. Toledo used three pitchers. Nelson was credited with the loss. Milwaukee won 8-5 from St. Paul. Keltner led the batting attack with two homers and a double for Milwaukee, sending four runs in.

Miner allowed eight hits and struck out ten batters in winning. Herring was the losing pitcher. Columbus and Louisville were idle, having met at an earlier date.

Today's Schedule No games scheduled.

FAMOUS RACE HORSE TRACED TO CIRCLEVILLE

That Circleville was the birth place of Zombrewer, 2:04 1/2, grandam of the great horse, Greyhound, was disclosed this week in an article written for "The Harness Horse", monthly publication, by H. Gardner Duffy, of Cleveland, a native of Circleville.

Zack Brewer, another Circleville native, owned Zombrewer, Duffy writes. Greyhound's third and fourth dams, Mary Bales, 2:26 1/2, and Molly J., were owned in Circleville, too, by Jesse Jones.

Greyhound, with a mark of 1:59 1/2 over the historic Goshen, N. Y. track, is regarded as the master harness horse of the century. He was handled by Sep Palin, a veteran of the track, in his history-making run.

Greyhound was sent on the Goshen track last week to beat the previous record of 2:02 3/4, and he did it with ease. His first eighth was clocked in 15 seconds and the half was negotiated in 29 1/2 seconds. The three-quarters' time was 1:30 1/2.

PROBE LOOMING ON GAMING OF BALL PLAYERS

ST. LOUIS, July 27.—(UP)—The St. Louis Star-Times said today that Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, planned an investigation into gambling on the part of major league baseball players.

According to the Star-Times, Judge Landis, in a telephone conversation from his office in Chicago, said he would "go to the bottom" of gambling reports. The investigation, the paper said, was an aftermath to the release of Rogers Hornsby as manager of the Browns of the American league last week.

Hornsby's two-year contract, calling for $20,000 per year for 1937 and 1938 was terminated suddenly by President Donald L. Barnes of the Browns. Later Hornsby surrendered the contract for approximately $7,000. Hornsby said that betting on horse races caused his release. He denied, however, that betting on the races ever interfered with his baseball duties. "It was Rog Hornsby's idea of enjoying himself," he said.

Judge Landis intimated that he might summon Milton (Alabama) Delmas, clubhouse boy for the Browns, as a witness. Delmas was quoted first as saying he had placed bets for many players, including umpires. Later he denied that he had ever placed a bet for anyone.

There are approximately 800 bookmakers in St. Louis and some are located in the vicinity of Sportsman's park.

Landis was quoted as saying "I'll have to roll up my sleeves and go to work on this one, if reports of Delmas running bets for players are true."

About This And That In Many Sports

Farr Talks Too Well Tells of Terrible Fight He'll Beat Joe Louis

By BILL BRAUCHER

The feeling growing in this corner that the customers who want to see Tommy Farr in a vertical position on the night of Aug. 26 in Yankee stadium had better get there early . . . and keep their eyes glued on Louis and Farr when they step to the center of the ring for the first few punches . . . Having just returned from looking over the Welsh wonder, and getting a load of his chatter, it strikes me that there is a guy tailor-made for the Bomber to bust into a million pieces with one lusty wallop.

Farr has been exercising his tonsils no end since setting foot to these shores . . . Mushky Jackson says its his shoulder blades he should be training instead of his vocal cords . . . that's my guess, too . . . he talks too good a fight to suit me . . . Tummus says 'ell defend the bloom'n' title three times after he wins it from Louis . . . then retire undefeated . . . furthermore, Louis is slow, most unclever, lacks experience . . . and he has seen the Bomber in the movies and knows how to beat him . . . also, once when he was 10 years old he saw two men battle on a mountain near his native heath (Tonypanny, Wales) . . . and they fought so long and so hard that finally their legs folded, so the spectators dug holes and placed the two combatants upright therein so they could carry on . . . It's just a tophole yarn . . . I'd say typical of British heavyweights to have to prop themselves up, eh wot?

"Why should I be afraid of Louis?" asks Tummus. "He's not abnormal, is he (you'd be surprised)? He is just another fighter with two arms, two legs (that's all Dempsey had, too). "I am a born fighter and the son of a fighter (are you sure your old man wasn't Cicero)? Sometimes I have fought as many as five fights a night (you're about to be promoted)."

And so on and on . . . Tommy says he found it hard to get along in England as a fighter because he was "not Eton", and if he "were Eton" it would have been easy . . . he ought to get along handily with Joe Louis . . . Joe isn't Eton, yet, Tummus, old pot o' tea . . . One of the boys asked Farr why he didn't knock out Max Baer . . . Farr replied he didn't want to . . . "Put yourself in my place. I had me up hand over hand, with nobody believing in me, and now I was in the ring with a man over whom victory would be sweet to me. I had no fear of his right, and after the first round I knew just how to fight him. I found I was winning easily from Baer, so I didn't want to take a chance by trying to knock him out!" . . . in other words, Tummus wasn't afraid of Baer's punch but didn't want to get hit with it, by George.

Farr beat Bob Olin, a light heavyweight, not so long ago, and one of the boys asked him what he thought of Olin . . . all hands were bowled over a bit by Tummus' reply to the effect that Olin certainly was one of the hardest hitters he ever had been matched with . . . Olin a puncher! . . . Old Tummus hasn't seen anything yet!

MONTANEZ IN LINE FOR TILT WITH CHAMPION

HOLLYWOOD, July 27.—(UP)—Pedro Montanez, Puerto Rican youth, today had a clear road to a lightweight championship bout with Lew Ambers, after knocking out Wesley Ramey of Grand Rapids, Mich., in the first round last night.

Montanez, rugged, cruel-hitting, hasn't lost a fight in six years. He put Ramey away in two minutes, 40 seconds of the first round after a dynamite left hook exploded on Ramey's chin.

Ramey was trying to pull himself to his knees when Referee Jack Dempsey counted him out. Montanez weighed in at 136 1/2, Ramey at 135.

Montanez has signed to meet Ambers for the title in the fall.

ARMY LOSES 3-0

Lundy Ferguson pitched two-hit ball for the Battery Co. team in the Tri-County softball loop Monday evening, but lost to the Circleville Athletic club 3-0. Purcell was the C.A.C. hurler. Infield errors, caused by a revised lineup, resulted in the loss.

SECURITY BOARD FIGHTS ERRORS

WASHINGTON (UP)—Commercial and industrial employers throughout the country have been cautioned by the Social Security board to get the right number when listing employees on the information reports.

Under Treasury regulations, LeRoy Hodges, director of the bureau of Federal old-age benefits, explained, employers must list employee account numbers on their information reports. Post-offices are asking that if an employee has failed to report his social security number, the employer should file an application form with sufficient supporting information to establish the employee's identity beyond reasonable doubt.

There is always the possibility of mistakes, Hodges pointed out, if employers merely submit lists of names to postoffices, to check against files in the hope of immediately finding out what account numbers had been assigned. Without sufficient information to identify the employee in question, the wrong number may be obtained and the resulting mistakes will prove costly to the entire program, Hodges said.

Hodges urged all employers who have not yet reported their social security account numbers to their employers to do so promptly. This applies also to those who have worked for more than one employer since Jan. 1, 1937, even though the period of their employment may have been one day or less.

Account numbers were issued to workers through the facilities of more than 45,000 postoffices which were utilized in the assignment of account numbers until June 30. Starting July 1, and thereafter, application forms for account numbers are obtained at any local postoffice, and at regional and field offices of the board. However, the assigning of account numbers will be made by the board through field offices, Hodges explained.

MINNESOTA PIKE GET UNIVERSITY METAL 'DEGREES'

DULUTH, Minn. (UP)—Swimming around somewhere in Northern Minnesota lakes are 3,000 wall-eye pikes possessing "degrees" from the University of Minnesota.

The fish are wearing tin, waterproof plates, showing they attended the university's school for fish, conducted recently near Lake Winnibigoshish.

And the fish didn't learn a thing—not even how not to get caught, but they are expected to teach naturalists how far pike travel and disclose their ultimate fate.

Prof. Samuel C. Eddy, aided by the state game and fish division and the U. S. forestry service, locked narrow metal strips, stamped "U. of Minn." to the jaws of 3,000 pike. Anglers catching the fish so marked are asked to communicate with Eddy.

Female fish were excluded from the school. Males were lured to class and tagged.

MICHIGAN SETS ASIDE ARCHERS' HUNTING DATES

LANSING, Mich. (UP)—Michigan will have a special open season on deer and bear for bow-and-arrow hunters this fall.

P. J. Hoffmaster, conservation director, said the archers will be required to purchase a special license to try their luck with "big game."

The 1937 Michigan legislature passed an act, which was signed by Gov. Frank Murphy, providing for a bow-and-arrow season on deer and bear from Nov. 1 to 14, inclusive, which will be followed Nov. 15 by the opening of the regular deer season.

Archers may shoot deer or bear in Isosco and Newago counties without competition from rifle hunters. Each bow-and-arrow hunter will be limited to one antlered deer, whose antlers are not less than 3 inches above the skull, and one bear. Possession of firearms by archers will be prohibited.

Canadian Liquor Flow To U. S. Remains Steady

OTTAWA, Ont. (UP)—Reopening of American distilleries has had little effect on the exports of Canadian liquor to the United States, it is revealed.

Trade figures available here show that Canada has exported 12,000,000 gallons of liquor to the United States since the Volstead Act was repealed, and the movement is continuing at the rate of approximately 500,000 gallons per month.

MINERS BURY "JINX"

EUREKA, Ariz. (UP)—A wooden cross with the words "Here lies the Jinx" marks the center of a small burial plot at the Buckhorn mine, 60 miles northwest of Eureka. Miners at the camp buried their "jinx," a piece of broken mining machinery that caused them considerable trouble, in a fenced-in grave in a conspicuous place.

AN INVALUABLE SIGNAL
SOME SIGNALS used by advanced players of the old school seldom are of value because the opportunity for them does not arise frequently. But when it does come along, the clear understanding of it can determine the gain or loss of a crucial trick, which may mark the difference between top and bottom score on a tournament deal.

After two passes, West opened the bidding on this deal with 1-Heart, North passed, East called 2-Clubs, South 2-Spades, West 3-Hearts and North jumped to 4-Spades. At all tables the bidding ended in the same contract.

The heart K was the opening lead in all cases, followed by the heart Ace, on which East gave a high-low, indicating he held no more hearts.

Where the variation in the scores now occurred, the East players read West's lead of the heart 3 as indicating that West held all the rest of the suit, so no more hearts were held by South. Had West held only five hearts, he should have led a card higher than his lowest, which would tell East that South had another. These East players trumped the third heart lead with the spade K and returned a club, which South was obliged to finesse, so that two hearts, a ruff, the diamond K and club K were lost.

If East ruffs the third heart with the spade 2, South overruffs and captures the spade K. When the diamond finesse loses to the K, and a club is returned, South does not need to worry about the finesse, as the diamonds will take care of the two losing clubs.

PREMIUM BOOKS PREPARED FOR CIRCLEVILLE'S BIG PUMPKIN SHOW

INTEREST OF HARD TURNS DOG SHOW

Feature Expected to

LOCATION UNDECIDED

Harry Denman Appointed Director for Display of Grain

Pumpkin Show directors took additional steps, Monday evening, toward the big fall festival to be held late in October when they met in the council chamber, to discuss plans already made. The meeting was called by Mayor W. J. Graham, president ex-officio of the organization.

The purpose of the meeting was to complete arrangements for the premium books which will soon be sent to the printer. Nearly all directors have completed their premium lists. Most of the lists are in the hands of Robert G. Colville, show treasurer and director of advertising. Mayor Graham has demanded that all premium lists be filed with Mr. Colville before August 1.

The dog show to be held under direction of the Pickaway County Bird Dog Club continues to hold the interest of the directors. Many details are to be worked out for the bench competition, which will be put on under supervision of the American Kennel Club, national organization. A superintendent and three judges will be assigned to Circleville by the A. K. C. Byron Eby, president of the Bird Dog organization, is in charge locally.

A location has not been determined for the bench show, although the East side of Court street north from Watt street is favored if the show is held outside. Several buildings are being considered for the exhibition, which is expected to draw more than 200 outstanding dogs to Circleville.

Elmer Wolf said that hogs and calves will probably be shown inside this year in an effort to increase the number of entries. Many exhibitors do not like to leave their stock outside because of the danger of bad weather.

Harry B. Denman has been appointed in charge of the grain section to replace Charles Stoffer, who is no longer in business on W. Main street, where the corn is shown.

Proctor Baughman, parade chairman, has added a novelty section to his comic and characterization parade. Otherwise, he reports, all parades will be the same as last year.

COUNTY FUNDS TO BE PLACED IN NINE BANKS

All banks of Circleville and Pickaway county were designated as depositories for county funds, Monday, when the commissioners allocated $240,000 in active and $145,000 in inactive money.

The four Circleville institutions, First, Second and Third National and the Circleville Savings and Banking Co. divide $240,000, each receiving $60,000. Under the new depository law no interest is paid for the money. Previously one-fourth of one percent was paid to the county.

Banks of the county will handle the active fund, the account being distributed as follows: First National, New Holland, $10,000; Farmers National, Williamsport, $25,000; Ashville Banking Co., $40,000; Citizens bank, Ashville, $50,000, and Scioto Banking Co., Commercial Point, $20,000. Interest of one-fourth of one percent is paid for the active fund.

All contracts with the banks become effective Aug. 23 when the present agreements expire. The new depository law removing the interest rate from inactive funds becomes legal Aug. 23.

ONE MINUTE PULPIT
A good man sheweth favour, and leniency: he will guide his affairs with discretion. — Psalm 112:5.

The Rev. Mary Lou Henderson, Kenneth Smith, Loretta Smith, Dorothy Nash, Mabel Elizabeth Henderson, Cecelia Irene Coleman, and Myrtle Henry have returned from Wilberforce university, where they attended the Tawawa assembly, a state meeting of younger members of the African Methodist Episcopal church in session last week.

Funeral services were held Sunday in Blanchester for Paul C. Rhude, 84, father of Howard L. Rhude, former New Holland school superintendent. The elder Mr. Rhude died last Thursday at the home of another son, Dennis. Four daughters and another son survive.

Dr. Joseph Stittler, of Columbus, brother-in-law of Mrs. Wealtha Abernethy, has been re-elected chairman of the Lakeside Summer school committee. The Rev. J. S. Freese, also of Columbus, a native of Stoutsville, was chosen a committee member for the United Lutherans of the Synod of Ohio at a meeting at Lakeside, Monday.

Renick W. Dunlap, of Kingston, spoke at the Kiwanis club meeting at the Pickaway Country club, Monday evening. He told of official Washington and described many of the leading persons in congress.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Robinson, of S. Court street, announce the birth of a daughter, Monday, July 26. The child has been named Marlene Ann.

FRANK PARKER CLINCHES DAVIS CUP FOR U. S.

WIMBLEDON, England, July 27 (UP)—The youngest Davis Cup team ever sent abroad by the United States won the treasured tennis trophy from Great Britain today when Frankie Parker beat Charley Hare, 6-2, 6-4, 6-2.

Parker's triumph, achieved before some 10,000 spectators, gave the United States the needed third point in the challenge round, and reduced the final match between Donald Budge and Bunny Austin to simply an exhibition.

Baptist Church Scene of Rites for Blanche Thomas

The Second Baptist church, Circleville, was the scene Tuesday afternoon of funeral services for Mrs. Blanche N. Thomas, wife of Charles Thomas, of Chillicothe, who died Sunday. She was born in Circleville March 9, 1908, a daughter of Jerry and Alice Redman Young. Surviving are the husband, her parents, three children and a sister, all residents of Chillicothe.

Burial was in Forest cemetery.

Lewis Pins Hope on Non Partisan League

ican Federation of Labor influences. Friends say he conceives this organization now as merely the political arm of his C.I.O.

Officers Resign

The realignment has been carried on quietly in a series of related steps which culminated in the resignation of Sen. George L. Berry, D., Tenn., as president, reportedly at the demand of Lewis and Sidney Hillman, treasurer of the League and president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers union.

No new president will be elected, leaving Lewis, as chairman, in control and Hillman, a CIO "brain-truster," as his right-hand man in future maneuvers.

Lewis is now telling his associates: "The league has enough officers as it is now. We do not need a new president."

First broad battlefront for the reconstituted league will be the 1938 congressional elections, for which Lewis is frankly planning in advance. It was disclosed that he has cemented a series of political understandings with various minority groups, including the Farmer Labor party and the Commonwealth Federations of the northwest.

Out For Power

Until now, labor's Non-Partisan League has been considered a powerful group which has faithfully supported both the re-election of President Roosevelt and the passage of many of his favorite measures. It has been made up of trades union representatives regardless of affiliation, and although it has constantly had a dominant C.I.O. coloration it has embraced a number of A. F. of L. leaders and members.

However, in his latest series of maneuvers, Lewis has been plying the influence of the Federation contingent, thus crystallizing his break with William Green and the A. F. of L. in political as well as trades union fields.

It has been recurrently reported that a "break" between Lewis and President Roosevelt was in the offing, but neither the labor leader nor the chief executive has commented publicly on such rumors. Frank discussion of the League's plans in the 1938 elections among Lewis's close associates indicates that a parting of the ways may have been reached already.

Split Suggested

Suggesting such a split were presidential criticism of C.I.O. steel strike tactics—as well as of the Independent Steel Corporation's refusal to sign contracts with the union—in his "plague of both your houses" statement and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins' almost simultaneous denunciation of sit-down strikers.

Lewis has been continually irked by what he believes to be indifference on the part of the administration to the cause of his steel strike and punctuated this belief with publication this week of sharp statements by his United Mine Workers union and Steel Workers Organizing Committee taking the government to task for alleged failure to protect strikers' rights.

After the defeat of the Roosevelt supreme court reorganization plan, which had been enthusiastically supported by both Green and Lewis only Green visited the president to "express his sympathy."

Third Party Looms

There has been frequent speculation on the possibility of a third party movement under Lewis's guidance, and now C.I.O. leaders are now discussing it openly.

Lewis recently solicited—and won—agricultural support when a union of sharecroppers, and farm workers meeting in Denver, Colorado, voted to join his committee. In addition, the C.I.O. is now engaged in unionizing cannery and agricultural workers in the southwest, particularly California.

racket which is running rampant in Lancaster and the smaller towns of his county.

Sheriff Radcliff, working with Judge J. W. Adkins of common pleas court has stood as a bulwark against gambling ever since he took office in 1931. His first move was to force out all slot machines. A cell in the county jail still holds many devices confiscated when the ban became effective. No move has ever been made to release them.

Racket Quashed

Shortly after Radcliff took office several men from an unnamed Ohio city approached him concerning the possibility of opening a dog track in the northern part of Pickaway county. They were refused permission despite a reported offer to "make it interesting financially." Several similar moves have been handled in the same manner.

The "numbers" game, while still operating in Circleville, is moving along at a much slower pace than two months ago before the sheriff's office started into action. Trial of Charles White, of Lancaster, arrested by the sheriff three weeks ago for operating the "numbers" game in Circleville in June, is expected to be assigned soon in common pleas court. White is free under $1,000 bond.

Free of Gambling

The city and county today are free of all gaming devices, at least so far as officials have been able to ascertain. Whenever any are reported they are ordered removed or, if this action fails, they are confiscated.

FORD FACING HARDEST FIGHT

at Ford's main plant in Dearborn, May 26. Ford agents are alleged to have inspired the attack and to have beaten unionists who were attempting to distribute "unionism" handbills. This trial will be held in the state courts.

Ford attorneys now are fighting the constitutionality of the NLRB. They plan to carry the issue to the U. S. supreme court.

Inventory Time

Meantime, the big Ford plant, sprawling along the River Rouge is closed because of inventory and vacations. It will resume full operation Aug. 9. Meantime, too, the UAW is intensifying its drive to organize, on a nationwide basis, Ford's 150,000 workers in 30 cities where he has plants. Approximately 89,000 of these workers are employed in the River Rouge plant.

Ford doesn't believe in unions.

He poses a question:

"When you join a union, they have got you, and what have you got?"

He also says that union dues, in effect, comprise a Caesar's tribute on men, "forcing" them to pay for "the right to work." He sees in the C.I.O. union "a scheme by Wall Street to control competition and labor."

Charges Made by C. I. O.

In turn, the C.I.O. huris serious charges at Ford. It alleges that his service department is one of "the most vicious labor espionage systems in industry." It charges that the "speed up" in his plant "is back-breaking to workers and saps their vitality, shortening their lives."

Ford theoretically is not in active charge. He has resigned from active control of the company. His son, Edsel, is president of the company. Henry Ford, nevertheless, still is the "general" of the Ford forces. At those little daily "round table" luncheons of Ford officials in a special dining room at the Ford plant, Ford's voice always is the word of command.

Ford's Mind Keen

It is at these dinners that the most important moves of the Ford company are planned. Ford's mind, his close friends say, is as keen as it always has been. Physically, he has kept himself as trim as an athlete. It is not ported that the Japanese army hospital there was overflowing with Japanese troop casualties in three serious engagements that have occurred since the week-end.

The first of these was at Langfang, midway along the 60 mile railroad between Peiping and Tientsin. The second occurred when Japanese troops tried to force their way into the Kwangan gate at the southwest side of Peiping. Chinese troops trapped half of them inside the wall and fighting ceased only when a Japanese mediator and a Chinese official escorted the Japanese to the embassy quarter. It was asserted that the Japanese virtually surrendered.

Then on the complaint that Chinese troops at Tungchow re-

by violent exercise. Occasionally he rides a bicycle, but most of his exercise is walking and running. Frequently, while walking, he breaks into a run. He can also clear a hurdle while running without apparent exertion, and frequently he surprises men much younger than himself by taking a flight of steps three steps at a time without drawing an uneven breath at the top.

Ford also enjoys a joke, and can smile at a joke on himself. He smiles when someone recalls how he built his first car in an alley garage and then found, on completion, that it was too big to get out the door. He knocked out a portion of the bricks surrounding the door and started on a trial run which later brought him a fabulous fortune.

fused to evacuate or disarm, Japanese this afternoon attacked the Chinese garrison there with airplanes and infantry.

A Japanese spokesman at Tientsin asserted that the Japanese "annihilated the garrison to the last man."

Japanese casualties were put at between 15 and 20 in the Tungchow operation and 21 in the fighting at the Kwangan gate.

The situation had become one of the most urgent gravity. One of two angry Japanese ultimatums demanding withdrawal of Chinese troops had expired, apparently, blandly ignored by the Chinese.

A second had as its deadline noon tomorrow.

Chinese sources asserted that China had decided to reject the demands.

MONTGOMERY PROPERTY DISTRIBUTED BY WILL

The $3,100 property of Lucy Montgomery, Walnut township, is divided among friends and relatives by her will admitted to probate Monday afternoon. Most of the property is in real estate, $2,650 being listed. The remainder of $450 is personal property.

Personal property is to be divided among Alice M., Anna, Harriett and Elizabeth Weaver, and Mabel Paxton. The Weavers are Walnut township residents, while Mabel Paxton lives in Dayton. The real estate is to be sold with Miss Montgomery's brothers, John, of Columbus, and Richard, of Circleville, each to receive one-third. The will designates, too, that Harriett Weaver and Alice M. Weaver each shall have $100 additional.

The will was written May 12, 1937, and Miss Montgomery's signature was witnessed by Mrs. Lewis Quillen and Mrs. Charles Koch. Appraisers are H. B. Quillen, A. Ray Plum and John Sark. Alice W. Weaver is the executrix.

PREMIUM BOOKS PREPARED FOR CIRCLEVILLE'S BIG PUMPKIN SHOW

INTEREST OF BOARD TURNS TO DOG SHOW

New Feature Expected to Add to Interest of Great Exhibit

LOCATION UNDECIDED

Harry Denman Appointed Director for Display of Grain

Pumpkin Show directors took additional steps, Monday evening, toward the big Fall festival to be held late in October when they met in the council chamber to discuss plans already made. The meeting was called by Mayor W. J. Graham, president ex-officio of the organization.

The purpose of the meeting was to complete arrangements for the premium books which will soon be sent to the printer. Nearly all directors have completed their premium lists. Most of the lists are in the hands of Robert G. Colville, show treasurer and director of advertising. Mayor Graham has demanded that all premium lists be filed with Mr. Colville before August 1.

The dog show to be held under direction of the Pickaway County Bird Dog Club continues to hold the interest of the directors. Many details are to be worked out for the bench competition, which will be put on under supervision of the American Kennel Club, national organization. A superintendent and three judges will be assigned to Circleville by the A. K. C. Byron Eby, president of the Bird Dog organization, is in charge locally. A location has not been determined for the bench show, although the East side of Court street north from Watt street is favored if the show is held outside. Several buildings are being considered for the exhibition, which is expected to draw more than 200 outstanding dogs to Circleville.

Elmer Wolf said that hogs and calves will probably be shown inside this year in an effort to increase the number of entries. Many exhibitors do not like to leave their stock outside because of the danger of bad weather.

Harry B. Denman has been appointed in charge of the grain section to replace Charles Stoffer, who is no longer in business on W. Main street, where the corn is shown.

Proctor Baughman, parade chairman, has added a novelty section to his comic and characterization parade. Otherwise, he reports, all parades will be the same as last year.

COUNTY FUNDS TO BE PLACED IN NINE BANKS

All banks of Circleville and Pickaway county were designated as depositories for county funds, Monday, when the commissioners allocated $240,000 in active and $145,000 in inactive money.

The four Circleville institutions, First, Second and Third Nationals and the Circleville Savings and Banking Co. divide $240,000, each receiving $60,000. Under the new depository law no interest is paid for the money. Previously one-fourth of one percent was paid to the county.

Banks of the county will handle the active fund, the account being distributed as follows: First National, New Holland, $10,000; Farmers National, Williamsport, $25,000; Ashville Banking Co., $40,000; Citizens bank, Ashville, $50,000, and Scioto Banking Co., Commercial Point, $20,000. Interest of one-fourth of one percent is paid for the active fund.

All contracts with the banks become effective Aug. 23 when the present agreements expire. The new depository law removing the interest rate from inactive funds becomes legal Aug. 23.

Williamsport Lodge Adds New Holland's Woodmen

Williamsport lodge No. 4475 of the Modern Woodmen of America added the membership of the New Holland lodge No. 6334 at a meeting Monday evening in the Williamsport hall. G. P. Hunsicker, consul of the Williamsport chapter for the last 40 years, presided.

Williamsport has 122 members. New Holland listed 23 men. The chapter headed by Mr. Hunsicker is one of the strongest financially in the state.

A social evening was enjoyed by the group of men.

at Ford's main plant in Dearborn, May 26. Ford agents are alleged to have inspired the attack and to have beaten unionists who were attempting to distribute "unionism" handbills. This trial will be held in the state courts.

Ford attorneys now are fighting the constitutionality of the NLRB. They plan to carry the issue to the U. S. supreme court.

Inventory Time

Meantime, the big Ford plant, sprawling along the River Rouge is closed because of inventory and vacations. It will resume full operations Aug. 9. Meantime, too, the UAW is intensifying its drive to organize, on a nationwide basis, Ford's 150,000 workers in 30 cities where he has plants. Approximately 89,000 of these workers are employed in the River Rouge plant.

Ford doesn't believe in unions. He poses a question: "When you join a union, they have got you, and what have you got?"

He also says that union dues, in effect, comprise a Caesar's tribute on men, "forcing" them to pay for "the right to work." He sees in the C.I.O. union "a scheme by Wall Street to control competition and labor."

Charges Made by C. I. O.

In turn, the CIO hurls serious charges at Ford. It alleges that his service department is one of "the most vicious labor espionage systems in industry." It charges that the "speed up" in his plant "is back-breaking to workers and saps their vitality, shortening their lives."

Ford theoretically is not in active charge. He has resigned from active control of the company. His son, Edsel, is president of the company. Henry Ford, nevertheless, still is the "general" of the Ford forces. At those little daily "round table" luncheons of Ford officials in a special dining room at the Ford plant, Ford's voice always is the word of command.

Ford's Mind Keen

It is at these dinners that the most important moves of the Ford company are planned. Ford's mind, his close friends say, is as keen as it always has been. Physically, he has kept himself as trim as an athlete. It is not ported that the Japanese army hospital there was overflowing with Japanese troop casualties in three serious engagements that have occurred since the week-end.

The first of these was at Langfang, midway along the 60 mile railroad between Peiping and Tientsin. The second occurred when Japanese troops tried to force their way into the Kwangan gate at the southwest side of Peiping. Chinese troops trapped half of them inside the wall and fighting ceased only when a Japanese mediator and a Chinese official escorted the Japanese to the embassy quarter. It was asserted that the Japanese virtually surrendered.

Then on the complaint that Chinese troops at Tungchow re-

by violent exercise. Occasionally he rides a bicycle, but most of his exercise is walking and running. Frequently, while walking, he breaks into a run. He can also clear a hurdle while running without apparent exertion, and frequently he surprises men much younger than himself by taking a flight of steps three steps at a time without drawing an uneven breath at the top.

Ford also enjoys a joke, and can smile at a joke on himself. He smiles when someone recalls how he built his first car in an alley garage and then found, on completion, that it was too big to get out the door. He knocked out a portion of the bricks surrounding the door and started on a trial run which later brought him a fabulous fortune.

fused to evacuate or disarm, Japanese this afternoon attacked the Chinese garrison there with airplanes and infantry.

A Japanese spokesman at Tientsin asserted that the Japanese "annihilated the garrison to the last man."

Japanese casualties were put at between 15 and 20 in the Tungchow operation and 21 in the fighting at the Kwangan gate.

The situation had become one of the most urgent gravity. One of two angry Japanese ultimatums demanding withdrawal of Chinese troops had expired, apparently blandly ignored by the Chinese.

A second had as its deadline noon tomorrow.

Chinese sources asserted that China had decided to reject the demands.

MONTGOMERY PROPERTY DISTRIBUTED BY WILL

The $3,100 property of Lucy Montgomery, Walnut township, is divided among friends and relatives by her will admitted to probate Monday afternoon. Most of the property is in real estate, $2,650 being listed. The remainder of $450 is personal property.

Personal property is to be divided among Alice M., Anna, Harriett and Elizabeth Weaver, and Mabel Paxton. The Weavers are Walnut township residents, while Mabel Paxton lives in Dayton. The real estate is to be sold with Miss Montgomery's brothers, John, of Columbus, and Richard, of Circleville, each to receive one-third. The will designates, too, that Harriett Weaver and Alice M. Weaver each shall have $100 additional.

The will was written May 12, 1937, and Miss Montgomery's signature was witnessed by Mrs. Lewis Quillen and Mrs. Charles Koch. Appraisers are H. B. Quillen, A. Ray Plum and John Sark. Alice W. Weaver is the executrix.
